Mekong Battle Begins: Shells Reach Saigon

Peace Talk Bid

Times News Services

Communist gunners less than eight miles from the centre of Saigon fired into the city's suburbs today in the first major attack on the capital since the current offensive began.

The shelling came one day after government troops made their first significant counter-attack against the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong offensive, re-occupying the abandoned city of Nha Trang, 188 miles northeast of Seaogon.

Communist forces also shelled at least 10 district capitals in the rice-rich Mekong Delta today.

Most of the shelling in the delta, where one-third of South Vietnam's 20 million people live, was in Dinh Tuong province about 35 miles south of Saigon.

The rice-rich and usually peaceful delta now appears to be shaping up as the next major target of the North Vietnamese forces.

U.S. military analysts says the probing attacks now beginning in the region are virtually certain to increase in intensity as part of a plan to both cut off the delta from the capital and tie up South Vietnamese forces there so they cannot reinforce Saigon.

In the short term, cutting off the delta would leave Saigon feeling isolated. In the longer term, it would create food shortages in the capital.

Meanwhile, the Pentagon denied that evacuation of United States citizens from Saigon was imminent despite a growing U.S. naval armada off South Vietnam.

The U.S. embassy in Saigon and independent sources reported at least one aircraft carrier, three destroyers, six amphibious ships and part of a marine division were standing by.

Three other aircraft carriers, including the nuclear-powered Enterprise, are within a short distance of the coast, reports said.

Informed sources said the marines were prepared to land in Saigon to evacuate Americans and some Vietnamese if major fighting or chaos broke out.

There are nearly 6,000 Americans still in South Vietnam, although many have begun leaving.

Britain today evacuated most of its 29-man embassy staff and all its dependents and their baggage aboard a chartered Cathay Pacific Airways 707 jet to Hong Kong, diplomatic sources said.

The actual diplomatic staff at the embassy will be 10 or fewer by the end of this week, the sources said.

Saigon's defences though may be bolstered somewhat by some of the several thousand troops that escaped from the abandoned northern sectors.

Though these soldiers arrived largely unarmed and in tatters, Pentagon officials believe that up to six battalions, or close to half of a 10,000-man division, can probably be reconstituted from

Phnom Penh, Thailand's foreign minister Chartchai Choonhaven said today in Bangkok that his government had contacted the rebels about starting peace talks with the Cambodian government in Bangkok.

"It is a direct contact," Chartchai told reporters after hosting a luncheon for Cambodian Prime Minister Long Boret prior to the latter's return to Phnom Penh.

"We made that proposal to the Khmer Rouge on a humanitarian basis," Chartchai said. "As a neighboring country of Cambodia, we don't want to see the continuing bloodshed.

"The Cambodian government accepted our offer to have Bangkok as a place for negotiations. It is now up to the Khmer Rouge to decide whether they want peace negotiations or not. If they turn down our proposal, they must be responsible for what will happen in the future to their country and people."

Insurgents also moved into Kompong Speu, 30 miles southwest of the capital, aftrer a shelling attack that wounded 30 persons.

Field reports said rebels on the east bank of the Tonle Sap River north of Phnom Penh were harassing the road along the west bank between Phnom Penh and Prek Phnou with mortar and machine-gun fire.

Eighteen rounds in three hours killed two persons and wounded one, but the U.S. airlift of rice, fuel and ammunition went on. Informed sources said the daily tonnage of ammunition has dropped in recent days as appropriate supplies dwindled.

Victoria Cougars got a scare when Kamloops Chiefs won the first two games of their best-of-seven Western Canada Hockey League playoff. But the Cats came back to win the first-round series four games to two Sunday, then were subjected to another scare. A report that a bomb had been planted on the plane returning them to Victoria proved groundless.

Cougars will meet New Westminster Bruins at Memorial Arena Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the first game of the semi-finals. Second game is at New Westminster Thursday with the third game of the best-of-seven series here Saturday. Page 10.

Playoff pairings are set in the World Hockey Association, too, even though there's a schedule game left tonight. Bobby Hull and Andre Lacroix ended the season Sunday by breaking a pair of pro hockey scoring records. Page 10.

The Western Lacrosse Association was hard hit when the eastern-based professional National Lacrosse League drafted several of its players. But there's a good chance of an agreement that will bring some of the NLL cuts back to the WLA. Page 10.

VANCOUVER — Sixty-one Cambodian and Vietnamese orphans arrived here Sunday from war-torn South Vietnam.

In Saigon, the government said today that "operation babylift" will go on and Vietnamese orphans will be allowed to fly out of the country to new homes in the U.S., Canada and other countries.

Deputy Prime Minister Phan Quang Dan announced resumption of the evacuation of orphans only hours after it was halted.

He said the government would make sure all orphans leaving the beleaguered nation would be adopted.

Resumption of the emergency babylift program came after pressure from officials of the U.S., Canada and Australia — the three countries directly involved in the evacuation — was put on the Saigon government, U.S. embassy sources here said.

Ten of the children who arrived on the flight to Canada Sunday were survivors from a U.S. military transport that crashed near Saigon Friday. Most of the orphans will be with their new families today.

Senator Ray Perrault, who represented the department of immigration at Vancouver International Airport, said before the Canberra announcement that Ottawa is re-assessing its position and will make a statement, probably early in the week.

He said Canadian officials in Saigon were evaluating the cases of orphans there and would be referring some for adoption in Canada in cases where there was a "valid need for adoption."

He said the terms of a valid need are best determined by Canadian officials in Saigon.

Wait, Worry Worth It As Thien Comes Home

Two-year-old Thien Erich Mueller was in a jolly frame of mind this morning, after his 6,500-mile plane journey from South Vietnam.

Thien is one of 61 orphan children two arrived at Vancouver International Airport Sunday, en route to new homes in North America.

Seven went to B.C. families, two of them in Victoria.

Thien was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Erich Mueller while a nine-month-old boy Jamie was adopted by Norman and Betty Henson of 4203 Leeron Place.

The Hensons were told in August the adoption had been approved.

Since then the whole family, including the Hensons' four other children (two of them adopted) have been waiting eagerly for his arrival.

Mrs. Henson and her husband, a building contractor, said they didn't want any further publicity because "it's a family thing."

Mrs. Mueller was also reluctant to talk about the adoption of Thien but said the publicity might encourage other families to adopt overseas children.

"It is because someone else gave an interview that we have Thien today," Mrs. Mueller said.

"We wanted to adopt a boy but there were none available here. Then the interview started us thinking about overseas children.

"I want to emphasize this was not a spur of the moment thing. We adopted Thien when he was in Vietnam in September. We had all the background on him and we saw his picture.

"After that it was just a case of waiting and worrying. First he was coming, then he wasn't. I'm all wrung out."

They met Thien at the airport in Vancouver on Sunday. He was fully dressed except for shoes.

This morning, Thien had a new set of clothes — and a pair of shoes.

He says something that sounds like "maaaa!" and then points. When he is hungry he picks up a dish and hands it to whoever is near.

Except for a cold, he appears in good health. He is in excellent spirits and looks well fed.

This morning he alternated between playing with his toys and hugging his new family.

"He has only cried once, so far. When I tried to give him a bath. So I just gave him a light wash. I'm glad he cried. It showed he wasn't in a state of shock."

Thien Erich Mueller is named after his new father

Israel Pressured By U.S.

TEL AVIV (UPI) — The United States is putting "low-keyed" pressure on Israel to make further concessions toward reaching a second-stage accord in the Sinai desert with Egypt, Israeli government officials said today.

"Low-keyed but definite slight pressure is being put on Israel by the United States which is putting Israel in an uncomfortable position," one official said.

Another official said that continued pressure by the United States on Israel "makes it more difficult for the Israeli government to rely on a continued U.S. friendship as a substitute for real and conventional strategic barriers."

Third Unit Of CUPE Seeks Pact

A third unit of Canadian Union of Public Employees is reported to be exploring separate settlement terms with management in the area's civic strike-lockout now in its 11th week.

The 91-member Capital Regional District employee group has informed the CUPE area bargaining committee of its intention to follow city inside workers in their attempt today to reach a satisfactory understanding with employers.

Both moves came quickly on the heels of a conditional settlement reached secretly by School District 61 and janitors and maintenance men belonging to CUPE 382, who agreed late Friday to accept the terms eventually negotiated by the area bargaining committee and regional employers.

The CUPE area bargaining group was meeting late this morning to discuss the latest developments in the civic and school employee confrontation with trustees, aldermen and regional directors in four core municipalities, SD 61 and Sidney.

Part of the matter to be determined in the initial talks between the local and the city and regional district is whether employers will lift their lockout of civic employees, a decision that will have to take into account the other municipal jurisdictions of the area.

There was a move at the weekend to lift the lockout as far as the juvenile detention home is concerned.

City outside workers Local 50 president Jim Walker, chairman of CUPE area bargaining, said he was personally willing to remove pickets from the institution in order to remove children from the undesireable alternative accommodation in RCMP cells.

Walker was still smarting today over secret talks between the school board and janitor's Local 382 to end the six-weeks-old maintenance strike at some 50 area schools.

Walker said the janitor local was entitled to bargain separately, just as inside workers at city hall may negotiate with Victoria as a single unit. The difference is that Local 382 failed to grant the area bargaining group its confidence.

"We're all autonomous," Walker said. "Any of the employers can do the same thing. But when you don't know what is going on it takes you by surprise."

Referring to the janitor's executive, he added:

ULSTER SUFFERS WORST WEEKEND

BELFAST (UPI) — A 30-year-old Roman Catholic on his way to work at a linen factory was shot to death today in Ulster's worst weekend of violence in two years that threatened the Irish Republican Army ceasefire.

Police said the shooting of the worker at Mossley, about 10 miles from Belfast, brought to 11 the number of persons killed in less than 48 hours in Northern Ireland. At least 80 persons were injured in the weekend upsurge of pub bombings and shootings.

Police said two gunmen jumped from a car and shot the worker point-blank while his two companions fled to safety inside the factory gate.

The shooting, believed by police to be a straightforward sectarian assassination, occurred as Britain's Minister for Northern Ireland met with top security advisers to consider emergency measures to meet the rise in violence.

MLAs Back on Job After Easter Break

The politicians will resume debate of the government's spending estimates for the next year and will pick up with the agriculture department where they left off on March 26.

So far they have used up about 30 hours of the 135 hours set aside for estimates debate under new house time limits and only the premier's office and finance department have had spending estimates approved.

Another 19 departments remain to be debated.

Only a handful of bills have been introduced by the government since the spring session began Feb. 18, despite Premier Barrett's promise that 70 to 90 pieces of legislation would be brought down.

Debate of estimates is expected to take the house into mid-May and, depending on the number of bills finally brought down, the session will likely continue into June.

Hughes Sought Longer War: Aides

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Billionaire Howard Hughes sought to continue the war in Vietnam until he could recover losses in his helicopter program, the Las Vegas Sun reported today.

The Sun said it confirmed the report with two former Hughes aides — one-time Nevada operations manager Robert Maheu and former "scientific advisor" John Meier.

"I would never have disclosed this voluntarily, but in late 1968 or early 1969 Hughes wrote a memorandum urging that we exert our influence to continue the Vietnam war in order to recoup Hughes' losses on the L.O. (light observationary) helicopter program," Maheu was quoted as saying by the Sun.

"I found the memorandum incredible and offensive and I did nothing about it," said Maheu.

Meier, who lives in a suburb of Vancouver, confirmed he had seen one memornadum dealing with the helicopter program and the Vietnam war. He said that the memo was sent to Maheu by Hughes suggesting that Maheu "should get to our friends in Washington and see what could be done about keeping the war in Vietnam going" to benefit the Hughes helicopter program.

Maheu, when contacted by United Press, said when he refused to co-operate with Hughtes' wishes regarding the attempt to perpetuate the war, that he believed it contributed to his losing his job with Hughes in late 1970.

"I wouldn't buy it (the Hughes directive) and in early 1970 Hughes reminded me of my lack of co-operation. I think this had something to do with my dismissal later that year," said Maheu.

Meier is being sued by the Hughes operation on charges he defrauded the billionaire in the acquisition of thousands of mining claims in Nevada in the late 1960s. Meier is also under federal indictment on charges of tax violations. He forfeited a $100,000 cash bond several months ago when he failed to appear in a Nevada court on the tax charge.

Maheu also has had legal encounters with the Hughes organization since he was fired in December, 1970, as head of Hughes' Nevada operations. Maheu won a $2.8 million libel suit in Los Angeles federal court last July against Hughes.

Angry Troops Eat Paymaster

WAT PRACHUM VONG (WP) — Brutalized Cambodian soldiers, cheated of their salaries and food for months, have killed a pay officer, disemboweled him and eaten his flesh and organs.

The killing portends what many Cambodians and foreigners are beginning to fear more than the Communists — a total breakdown in discipline among government troops.

The killing took place after the pay officer told troops of the battle weary 200th Infantry Brigade that they would be paid only after they advanced to a forward position of Phnom Penh's sorely pressed northwest permiter.

The officer, Lt. Pen Samwang, told the troops that he had their salaries with him — it turned out that he didn't — but would pay them only after they moved to the front.

An argument developed between Pen Samwang and the brigade's commander, Capt. Kim Sophanaran.

According to soldiers here, the paymaster suddenly turned on the captain with a drawn automatic pistol and opened fire at close range. Somehow, the ten bullets all missed the captain.

But some hit Lt. Chum Maly, killing him instantly, while others struck and wounded four soldiers.

The infuriated troops witnessing the shooting turned on the paymaster and shot him in the head. Then they fell on his body with knives, cutting open his chest and abdomen, and tore out his heart, liver and lungs. They also carved out his biceps and calf muscles.

They cooked and distributed the flesh among themselves and ate it, an act Cambodian soldiers on both the government and insurgent sides often commit on each other but rarely, if ever before, on their own comrades.

Papa Doc Plots?

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The CIA twice tried to assassinate the late Haitian President Papa Doc Duvalier, according to columnist Jack Anderson.

Anderson writes that agents in 1966 tried to persuade a pianist friend of the president's to poison him. But the friend, Robert Pritchard, refused to co-operate.

Anderson says that Pritchard testified he relayed this plot on to the U.S. embassy in Port-au-Prince, where a diplomat replied: "Wouldn't anything be better than this situation?"

JEWS MOURNING NAZI VICTIMS

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israel today started a 24-hour commemoration for the estimated 6 million Jews killed in the Nazi concentration camps and others who died in the Warsaw ghetto uprising.

Flags dipped to half mast, all places of entertainment and shops closed and garish neon signs were switched off in the solemn annual commemoration of martyrs and heroes' remembrance day. A wailing siren ushered in the 24-hour period at sunset.

Survivors of the Nazi death camps will ignite torches on the roof of the synagogue at Yad Vashem, a low concrete chamber in Jerusalem erected as a memorial to the dead of the Nazi era.

Inside, the names of the most infamous of the death camps are emblazoned in white on the stone floor. An urn with the ashes of the dead from the crematoria stands in one corner with an eternal flame flickering from the black crucible.

Tuesday, another steady siren will wail for two minutes when all traffic and pedestrians will pause to honor the memory of the dead.

New Family Greets Thien

Erich Mueller, 36, a civil engineer.

Kathy Mueller, 30, said they decided to retain his Vietnamese name because it is where he came from (the province of Bui Thien, north of Saigon).

"Also it is easy to pronounce."

(The H is silent and it rhymes with Ian).

Thien is their first adopted child but they are considering adopting more.

"I understand that children are more difficult to place after they are six years old. Our next adopted child will be older — six or seven — so all the children are about the same age.

"It is hard to explain why you adopt a child. Only someone who has gone through the experience fully understand it. The main thing, I suppose, is that we wanted a son — and we wanted Thien. We want him to be considered just a boy — not a Vietnamese boy.

"People get the wrong idea if they think the plane just landed with a load of orphans. These children were already adopted months before they came to North America. They just happened to arrive all at the same time.

"It would be wrong to rush out and adopt a child in a sudden emotional outburst about the Vietnamese orphans. It was to be considered very carefully.

"It is a very important decision. you can't change your mind. We have discussed it with our relatives and I think they understand."

The provincial government has made arrangements to handle as many os 500 vietnamese children on an emergency basis if the need arises.

However, Vic Belknap, provincial supervisor of child welfare, said only 38 families in B.C. have indicated a willingness to adopt overseas children. The department is beginning a survey of 550 B.C. families seeking to adopt children to see if more will accept those from overseas.

If an emergency airlift develops, the contingency plan involves housing orphans in part of Naden hospital in Victoria and in various locations in Vancouver including several high school gyms.

Officials stressed that the children who arrived Sunday were not part of an emergency evacuation but had already been placed in homes.

spokesman for Families for Children, a Montreal-based group organized by parents who want to adopt the refugee children, said "there is talk of 500 children coming to Canada."

"Our organization, as well as others in Canada, has been beseiged with phone calls from people who want to adopt a child."

All 61 children have been adopted or are in the process of being adopted. Four of the seven children staying in B.C. will live in the Vancouver area, two are going to Victoria families and one is going to Fort St. John.

One child was flown to Los Angeles to meet his new father, National Hockey League goalie Rogatien Vachon of the Los Angeles Kings.

Of the 53 children who flew on to Montreal, seven will go to families in Vermont and New York.

Bronstein said he doubted that there would be a massive influx of children because of the difficulties involved in ascertaining which are orphans.

Some of these parents will be looking for their children so "unless a child really has abandonment papers or orphanage releases there is no real proof that they are legitimate orphans and it's a ticklish situation," he said.

All but 10 of the orphans are less than two years old and the group includes an 18-year-old youth.

Victor Belknap, supervisor of child welfare in B.C., said one child will need hospital care and five others are suffering from mild cases of pneumonia.

"It was great — a sensational flight," said stewardess Darlene Harder of Vancouver. "The kids were really no trouble at all."

John Lynn, spokesman for the Vancouver Resource Board, said contingency plans exist to accommodate up to 500 more orphans should need arise. On Friday, he was told to expect 500.

But he said there is no indication now whether more children will be on the way.

Lynn said the 500 orphans would have stayed at children's residences around Vancouver which are being stocked with food, diapers and sugar water.

Another 407 Vietnamese orphans arrived in Seattle Sunday.

Sixty-five children met new parents from western states after arriving on the Pan American jumbo jet chartered by Holt Children's Services. Chicago was set to receive 76 children and 56 were to go to New York. But 16 children were taken to hospital here for chicken pox, measles and other illnesses, and their destination wasn't immediately known.

One child, supposedly on the plane, could not be accounted for. Two others were too sick to complete the 22-hour, 9,055-mile journey from Saigon and were in hospital in Guam.

The remaining children had no adoptive homes waiting and officials said they would be placed this month.

Doctors said all the children suffered from malnutrition. Two or three have heart ailments, one child has non-infectious meningitis, one has an infection of the blood stream, and another was suffering from seizures. Two children are listed in serious condition.

It took more than three hours to unload the crowded aircraft after it landed because of precautions ordered by public health officials.

Within minutes of the plane's arrival, between one dozen and two dozen demonstrators assembled at the airport, chanting "Vietnam for Vietnamese" and "Stop adotptions now."

Firemen Collect $18,297

Victoria firemen have collected $18,297 to fight muscular dystrophy — setting a record across the country in a cause firemen have shouldered since 1954.

The total is almost double that of any group campaigning for the first time.

Collecting for the Greater Victoria Firefighters were more than 250 members stationed at all major shopping centres.

More than two-thirds of the money collected will go to research into the crippling disease.

"They don't want to live with this disease. They want to fight it," said campaign chairman Terry Erskine of the Saanich fire department.

He said firefighters were overwhelmed at the public's response to the weekend campaign.

Boom Holds Oil Spill

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard said Sunday the overflow of 400 gallons of bunker oil at the Olympia Brewing Co. which spilled into the Deschutes river is still contained behind a boom.

The Marine Oil Pickup Service (MOPS) has cleaned up at least half the spill, but 150 to 200 gallons are still in the water in the swampy area where the spill occurred.

Cleanup operations resumed at first light today.

The spill took place when oil was being pumped into two connected tanks. A valve in one of the banks had been left open accidentally. About 1,500 gallons spilled, but only 500 drained into the river.

Smash-OPEC Talks Begin

PARIS (AP) — The oil-producing countries and some of their leading customer countries opened preparatory talks for an energy conference today in the wake of a declaration that the United States wants to destroy the powerful exporters' cartel.

Louis de Guiringaud, France's ambassador to the United Nations and chairman of the preparatory session, urged the delegates meeting behind closed doors "to let cooperation prevail."

The U.S. was not likely to make that goal easy. But since the task of the 10 delegation meeting is only to prepare for the conference during the summer, there was a possibility that agreement to go ahead might be reached.

De Guiringaud called for solutions which would reconcile respect for national sovereignty with the needs of "an interdependent world."

He also introduced a draft agenda which proposed selecting countries to take part in the energy conference before deciding what subjects the conference should discuss.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries at its summit conference in Algiers last month said OPEC would participate in a world energy conference only if it were expanded to include raw materials other than oil and the major countries exporting these materials.

The nine-country European Economic Community (EEC) — represented at the preparatory meeting by a single delegation — has suggested, as a compromise, that the world conference deal mainly with energy but extend its discussions to other raw materials whenever necessary.

Assistant State Secretary Thomas Enders, chief of the U.S. delegation, said in a British television interview taped Sunday in Paris that a basic aim of the U.S. is to "get enough market power" to hasten the collapse of OPEC.

A disturbance which brought rain to the north coast areas yesterday and this morning has started to weaken and split up along the west coast of Vancouver Island with the main portion moving southeastward in to the northwest U.S. and a second portion moving eastward into northern B.C. As a result shower activity is expected to be light with the west coast of Vancouver Island and the north coast remaining mostly overcast with occasional light rain showers. A high pressure area will start to build along the west coast for Tuesday with a clearing trend expected and slightly milder temperatures along the coast.

these stragglers within another week or two.

Eventually — possibly in several weeks — up to two divisions might be formed if the government can last that long. These forces can be equipped using already approved U.S. military aid that is still flowing into the country.

Even with these extra forces, however, the South Vietnames military situation is judged as all but hopeless by most top civilian and military officials here, although the Ford administration has been reluctant to say so publicly.

In a related development, President Thieu has ordered an inquiry into the responsibility of military leaders for the fall of the northern military regions.

In a television speech, Thieu said he would punish "shortcomings severely," and would not allow the army to be led by "defeatist cowards."

. . . After B.C. Plow Match

Charley Thomson of Chilliwack won the B.C. two-furrow tractor plowing championship at the B.C. championship plowing match, held at Cumberland Farm, 1528 Stelly's Crossroad.

Nearly 30 people entered the match, competing before a crowd of about 500 for trophies and prize money in eight different classes.

Norm Morrow of Agassiz beat six two-horse teams, including two from Linden, Wash., to win the open horse competition.

★

The Saanich two-furrow tractor championship, open to any B.C. resident, went to Dennis Cache of Chilliwack.

Top prize in the girls' under-19 three-furrow tractor competition went to Shirley Butler of Central Saanich.

The boys' under-19 two-furrow event was won by Alistair McNaughton of Agassiz.

The plowing match started at 10 a.m., and was officially opened at noon when Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich welcomed plowers to the Saanich peninsula.

The event was hosted by the Saanich Plowing Association.

Secret Hospital Debate

The Regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission, the capital district's powerful new planning agency to co-ordinate local hospital development is playing the old cat and mouse game. Internecine bickering, one-up-manship and pettiness among area hospitals resulted in years of inertia, producing nothing more formidable than a sea of rhetoric. At its inaugural meeting last Dec. 18 our brave new commission said it would hold open meetings but reserved the right to conduct some business in camera. Some reservation, as it turns out.

A consultant's report recommending district hospital roles will not be made public. Instead, the long suffering public is grandly informed that commission decisions on assigned hospital roles will certainly be public information. In other words, the same old paternalistic line: commissioners will discuss the report in secret, iron out their differences and announce a fait accompli to the public. That's how things are done hereabouts. It avoids all that messy democratic debate and public input.

Are the commissioners worried that ambiguities in the document might be confused by the public? If so, no greater ambiguity exists in the capital region than the future of hospital development. Or does the commission fear the report will stir up old animosities only papered over by the creation of a new bureaucracy? Perhaps if these animosities had been allowed to surface at the time, hospitals might have been further along now.

The last two planning unit meetings have been held in secret, presumably in order that commissioners can reach a consensus. They seem to have missed the point entirely. This report is a document requested by a public agency, paid for by the public, and dealing with that most public of issues — hospital development. It should be released immediately.

A Matter of Disclosure

UVic English Department Chairman Dr. David Jeffrey is angry because both local dailies published confidential minutes of the university's vice-presidential nomination committee. Stories included names of 17 faculty members recommended to succeed vice-president Stephen Jennings who did not receive the necessary votes to continue in the position without competition. Jeffrey considers publishing this confidential information "disgusting" and "reprehensible." He wonders where the normal professional standards we have come to expect in better newspapers have gone.

One great editor, John Delane of the London Times, said the press lives by disclosures. Better newspapers like the Victoria Times and sometimes even the Daily Colonist adhere to Delane's dictum. If we used discretion in publishing documents marked "confidential" newspapers would become gazettes for various special interest groups that exist in this city, province and country. Watergate and Daniel Ellsberg's papers in the United States, confidential drafts of the federal government's immigration green paper in Canada, and B.C. Hydro memoranda on the Columbia River Treaty leaked to the CBC give ample evidence of how democracy is served by disclosure.

A list of nominees for the vice-presidency of UVic is admittedly small potatoes besides the aforementioned, but the principle is the same. If a sizable proportion of UVic's faculty does not wish to see the vice-president continue in that position without competition it is news. So is a list of recommended nominees. UVic is a public institution, funded almost entirely by taxpayers' money. As such it is responsible to the public and should conduct its affairs in the open—something past administrations often ignored which Jeffrey appears set on perpetuating. UVic is supposedly a community of scholars, not an interminably bickering board of directors. Dr. Jeffrey is an able scholar who chairs an important university department. He should stick to mediaeval drama up there; the press can handle disclosures down here.

Ominous Talk of 'Commitments'

NEW YORK — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has added his voice to those who would have Americans believe the domino theory, that the collapse of South Vietnam would endanger American positions throughout the world. But Kissinger went further.

Not only is congress, in its reluctance to grant more military aid to South Vietnam, risking the domino effect, he told a news conference. It is also ignoring a "moral commitment" he and ex-president Richard Nixon made in working out the Paris Peace accords of 1973. Therefore, the question is not just that of South Vietnam's survival as an independent, non-Communist country. The question also is "what kind of a people we are."

Kissinger's implication is clear — that if the U.S. congress does not honor the claimed "moral commitment" Americans will be shown to be a perfidious kind of people. Such ominous talk is aimed at the Democratic congress and has little relation to reality.

Secret Accords

Aside from the egregious insult offered by Kissinger to the American people, whose financial and blood sacrifices for South Vietnam have been immense, the whole idea of a moral commitment stemming from the 1973 accords has to be questioned. Kissinger negotiated that agreement in secret. American promises he might have made were not embodied in any document requiring ratification by congress. And neither he nor Nixon had the right or the authority to make "moral commitments" about which the American people knew nothing.

Gerald Ford, for example, was House minority leader at the time of the Paris accords. But long after he became president in August, 1974, he was saying privately that he did not know what promises Kissinger might have made at Paris, or in securing South Vietnamese acquiescence to the accords, or whether any such promises were in writing. However skillful Kissinger may be at secret negotiations, he cannot elevate that kind of diplomacy into "moral commitments" by the American people.

What, moreover, do Kissinger and Ford offer? They apparently suggest that a three-year extension of more military aid would satisfy the great moral commitment, stultify the effects of the domino theory, preserve the American reputation for standing by an ally, and — in Kissinger's view — give South Vietnam at least a chance to become self-sustaining.

There is no reason to suppose that a three-year extension—even at the incredible level of $2 billion annually that the administration has proposed—would do any of those things. It could not satisfy a moral commitment to sustain South Vietnam if at the end of three years that unhappy country still could not defend itself.

HENRY KISSINGER
. . . "moral commitment" to Vietnam

If the domino theory means anything now, it would mean as much three years from now. And if the United States is bidden by history to stand by an ally, no matter how dubious, at all costs and in all circumstances, lest no one ever again accept the American word, why would the United States not be as obligated three years in the future as it is claimed to be in 1975?

Finally, if anyone really believes that three more years of any kind of aid, at any level, might make South Vietnam self-sustaining, he has not been in this world, but in some other for the past 15 years.

So the three-year limitation, it is a safe bet, would prove to be no such thing. If congress accepts that proposition now, and if it results in South Vietnam struggling along as an independent entity for three more years, it is as certain as anything can be that this administration, if re-elected, or some other if it is as mesmerized by Indochina as the last four were, will be back for still another round of aid—and talking once again of dominoes and moral commitments.

In fact, if the history of this fruitles war is any guide, it suggests that in three years, at any conceivable level of American military aid, South Vietnam will not be better but worse off—with more Vietnamese dead, homeless and mutilated, with the Vietnamese society and economy further blasted, and with the military position of the Thieu or some other non-communist regime further weakened.

Blood and Destruction

What kind of "moral commitment" is it for Gerald Ford and Henry Kissinger to urge congress to fund a war for what they describe as American objectives, when it is the Vietnamese people who will pay the real price in blood and destruction?

It would be far better to twist Thieu's arm, as Kissinger did not hesitate to twist it at the time of the Paris accords in 1973, to enter into real peace negotiations with Hanoi now while something is left to negotiate. But there is not much chance that Kissinger and Ford will do that.

"The only lesson that our politicians seem to have learned from the 1947-1952 China trauma," John Paton Davies recently wrote, "is that a Communist takeover in an East Asian country can be politically disastrous for American politicians."

So they ignore, willfully or otherwise, "the far more important China lesson . . . that the United States cannot make good serious deficiencies of leadership and collective will in a foreign country"—not with troops, not with money.

" . . . well so much for the Middle East . . . how's it with you and southeast Asia . . . ?"

Administration

In your March 17 edition, you commented upon what you described as "a minority report" of the Family and Children's Law Commission. More particularly, you stated that commissioner Rita MacDonald and myself have concluded that in dealing with children in conflict with the law "a stern legal approach seems inappropriate."

The report goes on to infer that the majority of our commission favors "tighter handling of juvenile delinquents," while Ms. MacDonald and myself stress counselling as an alternative Unfortunately, this report is both inaccurate and misleading.

The fourth report of our commission is entitled The Family, the Courts and the Community. Anyone reading that report will note that the value of effective family counselling has been stressed throughout the report. The members of our commission were unanimous not only in recommending better counselling, but also in our recommendations with respect to the special needs of some juveniles who may require secure accommodation, either on a pre-disposition or a post-disposition basis.

The only issue upon which we failed to achieve consensus involves departmental responsibility for the provision of counselling services throughout the province. Ms. MacDonald and I, in our alternative proposal, simply express the view that if one government department is to have exclusive jurisdiction, we preferred the integrated child welfare approach, utilizing the wide range of child welfare services presently available within the department of human resources.

In explaining our position. Ms. MacDonald and I did not say that "a stern legal approach seems inappropriate." But in expressing our preference for the integrated child welfare approach, we made the following statement: "In acknowledging that many of the needs of children are not the concern of the law, we favor narrowing the present jurisdiction of the juvenile court, with the diversion of children out of the juvenile justice system who can be more properly assisted through counselling and support to the entire family unit. For this reason, we think that family counsellors working within the human resources department can most effectively provide service where a stern legal approach seems inappropriate."

During the past 15 months, the members of our commission have considered and debated numerous issues. In view of the consensus which we have reached in considering the most significant of those issues, both Ms. MacDonald and myself are anxious to stress the fact that our alternative proposal, contained in the fourth report, dealt primarily with an administrative matter. We are in agreement with the remaining 65 recommendations contained within the report. — Judge Ross Collver, Vice-Chairman, Family and Children's Law Commission.

Labor Court

We need a labor court right now, more than anything else. It is time to put a stop to this dictatorial power of both labor and industry.

It is unthinkable to me that a few men, in union or industrial management, can have the power to let millions of people suffer needlessly. Just because they want more money and benefits.

They are totally arrogant and indifferent to others including their own family.

This court should have the same power over labor disputes as has the criminal court now over criminal cases.

The judges and jury should consist of say nine economists, three appointed and paid by industries, three appointed by the government and three by labor unions.

This court should sit all year around. Each of the three parties should have their own offices, and field workers. Their job should also include valuation of all categories of jobs, from dishwasher to farming, logging sawmills, oil drilling, mining, etc. And armed with this information it should be after a reasonable time almost routine to come to a fair solution in a reasonably short time.

This court's judgment should be binding on all parties and backed up with all the power that is now meted out by the criminal courts.

All labor disputes are to go to this court, and no strikes, or pickets are to be allowed at any time.

In cases where it is felt that the three parties are in a deadlock, for political, financial, or any other reasons and no agreement can be worked out to the satisfaction of all parties then there should be a call to a fourth and independent panel of three judges, in some respects governed as the court of appeals. Their ruling should be binding on all parties.

Another reason for the formation of a labor court. Today company executives and presidents come from universities. They are competent in writing figures, with a good manner of speech, respectable dressers and good public speakers at meetings.

SUPREME COURT OF CANADA
. . . need one for labor

But they know nothing about labor in the field, they know nothing about how much energy and skill it takes to do a certain job. So therefore they are in no position to relate to the workers and their problems on a certain job.

Labor overall, is very good, and reasonable, but hates discrimination and this is what appears today, and union officials are not interested in informing their membership of the facts, as they are only interested in holding on to their own jobs at all cost.

I'm not sure that it's right in today's complex world, that one comany, should be in a position to make a decision that involves the whole country, utterly millions of people.

Therefore we need a labor court to assure that the workers and management maintain a fair and equitable balance in comparison to world markets and fair wages for work done, and profits received. A maximum employment at all times, this makes for a healthier and happier people also.—Vox populi.

Death Traps

Get rid of the death trap. The death trap is the leg-hold trap used for trapping animals. It holds them by the leg until they starve or freeze. Sometimes the animal chews its leg off to get away. The animal's chance of surviving with three legs for long is very doubtful. He would likely be killed by a bigger animal or starved because he couldn't run after his prey.

This trap kills all animals, not just the fur-bearing ones that the trapper wants. The trapper then throws away many animals that he does not want. The trapper also catches in these traps sled dogs and pet dogs.

The best solution of all is to get rid of all traps. How can we stand to see animals snapped in half, or caught by both feet and left to die or left to chew off one leg and try to survive in the wilderness as a cripple! Let's all do something about it! Get rid of all traps. — Gary Parker, Uplands Elementary School.

Hunter Wrong

Newspaper columnist Bob Hunter wrote an article in the Vancouver Sun March 3 and a few days later it was reprinted in the Victoria Times. Mr. Hunter gave readers the impression that log owners were exhibiting a nonchalant attitude in the matter of drift logs and floating debris and that Gulf Log Salvage Co-operative Association was a monopoly set up by the forest industry to increase the industry's profits at the expense of log salvage permit holders.

I wrote to Mr. Hunter as president of Gulf Log Salvage challenging his sources of information and gave him an explanation of the facts. As a result of this letter Mr. Hunter rechecked with his sources and found the position as I explained it to be correct. Mr. Hunter, with great credit to him, printed Gulf Log Salvage's version in his column in the Vancouver Sun on March 24, stated he was wrong, and expressed his apologies.

For interest of your readers I am outlining some facts which clarify the forest industry's position on drift logs and associated debris.

In January, 1974, the Council of Forest Industries published a report on log losses and debris control.

The report's findings and recommendations were accepted by the industry and circulated to Council of Forest Industries and Truck Loggers' Association members.

Co-operative assistance was promised by both federal and provincial government departments.

An interim board of debris control, chaired by Gordon Draeseke, COFI president, with membership from industry, Truck Loggers' Association, federal and provincial governments was established. A 1974 program costing $90,000 was agreed upon. The federal and provincial governments contributed approximately $10,000 each and the industry paid the balance. The program was administered by Council of the Forest Industries.

Most sorting grounds ordered or obtained bundling equipment and machinery and a considerable increase in the bundling of small hemlock and similar logs took place.

The interim board is currently planning a continued and improved program for 1975 at a cost of $125,000. The need to expand operations into new areas is being explored.

Gulf Log Salvage is co-operating fully in this program. In recent years the association has paid $269,000 for the establishment of log receiving stations out of the owner's share in the No Mark Visible funds. These stations are operating at Richmond (Middle Arm Fraser River), Howe Sound (Longview), Powell River (McRae Cove) and Campbell River (Bold Point - Quadra Island) areas.

We feel that with the added support of senior governments and harbor authorities that this problem can be licked.—D. H. McAlister, president, Gulf Log Salvage Co-operative Association.

From the Times of April 7, 1915

VANCOUVER — "Schools should have a larger share in moulding the character of Canadian democracy. They should teach the principles of citizenship. Teachers should be students of civic, social and economic problems in their communities." So said Robert Sparling, president of the British Columbia Coast Teachers' Association, at the association's 22nd annual convention here. The public school, he said in giving the president's address, stood as the mightiest and most potent factor for good in the individual life as well as in national life. The school of today was good, but the school of tomorrow would be better. More emphasis would be laid on the child as the central object, than on the system or courses of instruction.

Israel Finds No One Likes A Winner

JERUSALEM — Following Israel's victory in the Six-Day War of 1967, the country's leading humorist, Ephraim Kishon, made an ironic prediction. Israel, he said, would lose the love and admiration of the world because its pushy insistence on beating the Arabs had deprived foreign humanitarians of the chance to write heartbreaking obituaries for the Jewish state.

Today, Kishon's savage joke is cited frequently here in discussions of the deterioration in Israel's relations with Western Europe since the Arab-Israeli war of October 1973. In fact, Europe's present coolness is regarded as the most ominous example of how the Arab world has forced Israel into diplomatic isolation.

The underlying reason, many Israelis feel, is that their battlefield successes in 1967 removed them from the position of the Middle East underdog.

In the Israeli view, this had several effects, including a progressively greater willingness by Europe to show concern for the plight of the Palestinian Arab refugees. Most important, though, the Israelis charge, is that the easing of Europe's old sense of guilt toward the Jews made it much easier for the Arabs to exploit oil to drive a wedge between Israel and Western Europe.

For example, many Israelis think that the European nation that has remained Israel's best, unswerving friend in the aftermath of the Arab oil embargo is Norway. But, it is also pointed out, Norway is expected to achieve energy self-sufficiency soon through its stake in the North Sea oilfields, and thus can afford to be relatively independent in expressing its feelings.

Most other European states have followed the direction set on Nov. 6, 1973 when the foreign ministers of the nine-nation European Common Market met in Brussels to consider a response to the embargo. Until then, only one member, France, which broke with Israel in 1967 to champion the Arab cause, had relations with the Israelis that could be described as strained. All that changed with Brussels.

Spurred by visions of a Europe whose citizens would be shivering in homes without heat and whose roads would be littered with automobiles without gasoline, the ministers hastily adopted what is still known in Common Market circles as the "oil in our time" resolution, an unabashed attempt to appease the Arabs by calling on Israel to meet almost every Arab demand short of giving up its own existence.

Since then, old friends like the Netherlands, Denmark and West Germany have given their support to collective Common Market statements and United Nations resolutions scolding Israel for intransigence in failing to give up occupied territory or deal with the Palestinian refugee groups.

Still, the predominantly anti-European attitude of the Israeli public is not shared by the Israeli government. Although they are not exactly happy about the present policies in Western Europe, Israeli officials and diplomats say that there is a fairly big difference between the public postures of many European governments and what actually happens behind the scenes.

The Israelis are aware that in almost every European country, even including France, public opinion is still heavily in their favor, and they feel that this factor alone will bar the European governments from reaching the point where they would stand aside and allow the dissolution of Israel.

In short, the Israeli government appears to believe that while Europeans are being pragmatic, there are definite limits to how far they will tilt towards the Arabs.

During the recent United Nations special debate on the Palestine question, the Europeans acquiesced in the controversial decision to allow Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, to address the General Assembly. Similarly, the majority came out for creation of an independent Palestinian state on Israeli-occupied territory. In the end, though, when it came to voting on the Arab demand that Israel be dismembered and merged into a secular state of Arabs and Jews, the Arabs were able to muster almost no European support.

Relations with traditional allies like Denmark and the Netherlands are almost back to their pre-1973 level, and only a few days ago, Dutch Foreign Minister Nas Van Der Stoel abruptly postponed an important visit to Saudi Arabia to protest a Saudi refusal of a visa to a Dutch Jewish journalist.

Another reason for encouragement, Israeli sources say, can be found in recent governmental changes in the West European big three: West Germany, Britain and France.

The change in Britain has been met with particular, if subdued, pleasure here. Former Conservative Prime Minister Edward Heath and his foreign secretary, Sir Alec Douglas-Home, had been regarded as only a notch behind France in pursuing openly pro-Arab policies. By contrast, the leader of the present Labor government, Prime Minister Harold Wilson, is considered a good friend.

Because of this, the Israeli government does not seem overly concerned by Wilson's low profile on Israel. The feeling here is that if the Labor Party remains in office, and if Britain's share of the North Sea oilfields leads it to energy self-sufficiency, London's support for Israel will become progressively more open.

Similarly, in regard to West Germany, the Israelis are not unhappy about the replacement of former Chancellor Willy Brandt by Helmut Schmidt. Despite Brandt's unblemished record as an anti-Nazi there was apprehension about his efforts to capitalize on this to disentangle West Germany from the long-standing "special relationship" fostered by German guilt over the Nazi era.

Although the Schmidt government also finds it wise to say as little as possible about Israel publicly, it seems much less concerned about putting labels on the relationship. In addition, Schmidt's awareness of the past and his close military ties with Washington have left the impression that in a real crunch West Germany will not forget its obligations to Israel.

Even where France is concerned, Israeli officials say that things are better than they appear on the surface despite President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's continuation of policies of his predecessors Charles de Gaulle and Georges Pompidou of making France the Arabs' strongest ally in the West.

Privately, however, Israeli sources say that Giscard has toned down some of the sharper edges of French policy. Under Giscard, the sources and, France has given Israel some quiet but highly important assistance in its economic relations with the Common Market, and Giscard reportedly has gone out of his way to reassure the Israelis that while Paris and Tel Aviv may differ over the proper way to achieve a Middle East settlement, France fully supports Israel's right to a secure existence.

Mercy Is a Few Less Scars

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH

SINGAPORE — At dawn the other morning eight men were hanged in Singapore. They were marched to the scaffold in three ranks of three with one blank file. Seven of them murdered a merchant and his two assistants in a double-cross over an illegal deal in gold bars in 1971. The eighth killed a one-armed man two years ago.

Their appeals for clemency to the Privy Council in London and the President of the Republic here were rejected. The last wish of two brothers among them — to donate their eyes and kidneys to those who will have more use for them in future — turned down (facilities for removing the organs quickly do not exist at the adjacent hospital). Their parents were told to collect their bodies, and hearses of the Singapore Casket Company stood by.

The debate between those who believe that severity brutalises and those who believe that leniency spoils has subtle overtones in predominantly Chinese communities, for much misery and misrule in their long history have left many Chinese with an instinct for regarding all authority as the persecutor of the underprivileged, and all laws as precision instruments for torturing justice. The Singapore government, however, has taken an unequivocal stand. There are no psychological quirks here — say "crime" and the instinctive response is "punishment."

Two young Chinese armed robbers who violently resist arrest are given nine years and 40 strokes of the rattan (cane) between them, and a 21-year-old Malay convicted of carrying an unserviceable revolver loaded with six rounds is sentenced to 14 years in jail and 18 strokes. Another delinquent was told this month he was "very fortunate" that a "merciful view" had been taken of his case. Otherwise he might have received 112.

How is the beating administered? Prisoners are medically examined and a protective device put over their spines. They are then strapped naked over a stand and given the whole dose by an official caner who may soon draw blood — but strikes twice in the same place almost as rarely as lightning. The victims can barely support the terrible pain, and the scars, the Director of Prison remarked last year, are "a source of humiliation throughout their lives."

Tough penalties may keep the level of crime low in Singapore, but it nonetheless rose by nearly eight per cent in 1974, and the Police Commissioner has disclosed that although a criminal can be hanged for even attempting to use a weapon — fewer than 300 private guns are licensed on the whole island — armed robbers opened fire in 22 cases, killing four, and there were 62 murders in all, five more than in the preceding year.

Skeletons Found

In the first 11 days of May alone the skeletons of five victims of foul play were found plus the dismembered corpse of a woman; a money-changer was shot dead and a second injured; a financier and a golfing attendant were separately stabbed to death, and a visiting businessman was found murdered in the Hilton Hotel — and this in a mini-republic of little more than two million souls.

In a recent week some 70 secret society gangsters were arrested, 190 suspected drug addicts and pushers were picked up, and 79 cans of moonshine samsu — an illicit rice liquor — were seized. Just down the road one man went on a daylight knifing spree in a petrol station, and another threw a bomb at a businessman from a moving car while he was practising putts on his lawn.

Yet Singapore is a clean, prosperous, well-run State with an effective police force untouched by major scandal, whose crime-busters have used their five-round Smith and Wessons and their FBI shooting-style to pull off some notable coups against the underworld. Crime is competently contained — of 15 known gangs of armed robbers, members of 11 have been arrested, for example — but the question that remains unanswered is: does the stiff price of failure cow the criminal, or offer him a challenge?

And not only the criminal. Samsu is illegal because it will kill and blind for only 40 pence (one dollar) a bottle — one binge in Malaysia last year left 49 children fatherless overnight. Yet police recently caught three men brazenly brewing the stuff in a 44-gallon drum in a crowded enclave of shacks next to a main road in Singapore, and storing the mash in a garage.

Again, vandals may be caned, fined up to $1000 and thrown into prison for three years, but youth continues to foul, jam, or rip apart lifts in government high-rise housing blocks, tear up trees, smash public lighting and wreck public fountains, cover walls with smut and eviscerate telephone booths.

Motorists can be jailed for three months for using bus lanes (third offence); they are now subject to a points system which can cost them their licences for six months if they earn 12 demerits in a year (even illegal parking counts one point), and they may be tracked down by special enforcement squads if they drive dangerously. It is an offence to jaywalk, to smoke in a bus (fine: up to $240 — and possibly a second $240 for breaking the litter-laws by spilling ash), to refuse to show a bus ticket to an inspector, or to jump a taxi queue (fine on first conviction: $192; on third conviction: $480 — or three months).

But this is still a land of light-shooting, lane-switching highway acrobats, and I still find myself yelling indignantly at jaywalkers and maverick queue-jumpers who refuse to be corralled with the rest of the human herd between the railings of prescribed pedestrian bridges and taxi-stands. A local colleague counted 92 motorists and motor-cyclists roaring over pedestrian crossings while people were on them during a one-hour check last autumn. More than 35,000 drivers were booked for speeding in 1974, and one person was killed and 28 others were injured on the roads every day.

If some of the transgressors are merely ignorant or indifferent, others are not only openly defiant, but potential bureaucrat-bashers. Health inspectors on rough beats have taken up karate and kung-fu, but that has not always saved them from the vengeance of irate street-hawkers reported for using dirty dishes or flinging refuse into the gutter, or the wrath of truckdrivers stopped for slopping muck on the roads. Last month an impetuous barrow boy was jailed for slashing a sanitary inspector in the neck in a Singapore market.

The civil servant agent of a regime rich in rules and regulations is often looked at askance. In the local press, reporters and readers record the insolence or the fatuity of jacks-in-office who have become mentally petrified or corrupted by their own paper-power — like the joker who told applicants for a licence for a recital of continental lyrics: "If you are a Singaporean you can only sing in English, Mandarin, Malay and Indian. If you want to sing in German, go to Germany, and if in Italian, to Italy."

The officials complain that the citizens are not civic-minded, but a mechanically-minded 11-year-old who saves seven people trapped in a lift is primly reprimanded by the Housing and Development Board for taking a screwdriver to government property (while the vandals who originally tampered with the mechanism are forgotten).

Protect Innocent

However, although one may be tempted to quote the legendary Taoist philosopher, Lao Tzu — "Govern a State as you would cook a small fish, meddle with it too much, and it will fall apart" — that would be unfair to the most conscientious government and competent administration in Southeast Asia. A smear is always the most conspicuous thing on the page it spoils, and the repute of a hard-working public service suffers accordingly from the antics of a moronic minority.

As for the stiff punishments meted out in Singapore, they must be seen in their correct hemisphere. In 1974 a district judge in Taiwan ordered a man to be executed for forcing a pop-singer to pose in the nude, and an American Congressman has pointed out that a decree passed in South Korea makes a student who fails to turn up for his examinations liable to a sentence of death or life imprisonment.

Like the French law, the Singapore judicial system is more concerned with protecting the innocent than sparing the guilty. If things are not perfect even given our somewhat draconian legislation, its champions ask, what would they be like without it?

Enough Food, India Claims But Poor Cannot Afford It

NEW DELHI — No one dies in India because there isn't enough food, Agriculture Minister Jagjivan Ram says. They die because they don't have enough money to buy food.

This distinction is important, Ram said, because it indicates that India produces enough food to feed its 560 million people.

As the minister sees it, the problem facing the government is how to raise half of these people from below the "poverty line" to where they can afford the high cost of survival.

In essence, Ram's contention is that the sum total of India's agricultural output divided by its population equals a survival diet for everyone. What goes wrong is that those with extra money buy more than their share, farmers waiting for higher prices hoard their stocks, the government is unable to buy enough supplies to maintain its public rationing system and the poorest people suffer.

Bearing all this in mind, Ram has launched an oblique assault, rather than confronting the monumental food problem head-on.

Improved morale is the key to his attack. "Food is largely a matter of psychology," he said. "If you create an attitude of shortage, then the shortage becomes aggravated."

In his first interview with a foreign journalist since taking over the vital ministry six months ago, Ram said his efforts to improve psychological attitudes are beginning to pay off.

"We have already begun to mobilize large amounts of food which have been immobilized," he said.

He noted that in a country with 150 million households, if each housewife "hoarded" just five pounds of wheat or rice, a vast amount is "immobilized."

In the last month, food prices have dropped two to three per cent. To some extent, this drop must be credited to Ram's campaign. From his first day in office, he has denied that India is facing a food crisis. While the facts disprove this claim, some Indians, evidently, are buying Ram's line.

A more important factor, however, has been the fairly widespread winter rainfall. It rained in much of northern India, the country's wheat belt, on New Year's Day, and farmers have taken this as a happy omen.

Their anticipation of a good crop, to be harvested in the spring, has induced a number of farmers, wholesalers and shopkeepers to break out their hoarded stocks.

While experts consider it far too early to say just how good the harvest will be four months from now, government officials are enthusiastically predicting a record, or at least a crop equalling the 1971 spring record of 42 million tons. Total food production that year was estimated at 105 million tons. The year before, the total was a record, more than 108 million tons.

Brushing aside field reports of starvation deaths in various parts of northern and central India in the past six months, Ram said "no one has been able to prove to me that any of these people died because there was no food in their villages."

Ram's argument loses its significance in the failure of public distribution system. To the poor villager, there's no comfort in knowing that he's starving because he can't afford the grain on sale in his local shop rather than because the shop's shelves are empty.

Furthermore, the immediate outlook for assuring full shelves is extremely bleak. By last week, the government had managed to produce just 1.2 million tons of rice and coarse grains from the harvest brought in last November.

Last year, the government was able to purchase 3.8 million tons from this harvest, and still the result proved disastrous.

To make up the gross deficiencies in procurement, the government has had to divert vast sums of its scarce foreign-exchange earnings to buy food grains overseas.

Most agricultural experts in New Delhi, Indians as well as foreigners, see little cause for optimism. "There is undeniably a major food crisis in this country," said one Western specialist who has worked in India for a decade. "And Mr. Ram has done and said nothing which proves the contrary."

CAMBODIA COULD HAVE COME CHEAP

russell baker

Nobody has explained how the government came up with the $350 million it cost to salvage half of an obsolete Russian submarine from the bottom of the Pacific Ocean, and responsible people who understand the U.S. government may dismiss the question as silly.

Everybody knows the government has large funds of money secretly at its disposal for projects of this sort. When the urgency of the project is sufficiently compelling, the cash can be dug up. This being the case, however, a more puzzling question arises: to wit, why couldn't the government come up with the $222 million it says it needed to "save" Cambodia?

The obvious inference is that the government is not so interested in saving Cambodia as it wants us to believe. The arithmetic of the two salvage ventures — Cambodia and submarine — is enough to suggest the government's true sense of Cambodia's value. Consider:

Cambodia: $222 million.

Submarine: $358 million.

Well, the government will explain that this is an irresponsible distortion. The submarine salvage was financed from secret funds of the Central Intelligence Agency. This money is hidden in other agencies' budgets; hardly anybody knows how or where. Congress says take it and don't tell us what you're doing with it.

Money for Cambodia, on the other hand, has to be doled out by Congress in public view, the Administration will explain. Therefore, the arithmetic above suffers from the classic error of adding apples and oranges.

The trouble with this explanation is that it isn't so. The government financed a lengthy war in Laos not long ago — and may still be doing so, for all the public knows — from the C.I.A.'s secret budget. Are we now to believe that if President Ford were determined to save Cambodia he could not cadge from C.I.A. the $222 million he says he must have to do the job?

A government willing to spend $350 million to satisfy its curiosity about Soviet hardware would surely not play the miser for a paltry $222 million if it truly believed this amount would preserve a country essential to national welfare.

The aroma of politics is heavy over all this transparent duplicity. Secretary of Defense Schlesinger has already accused Congress of causing an American failure in Indochina with its "niggardly" refusal to put in more money.

This seems an odd criticism from an Administration that valued Cambodia at considerably less than an obsolete submarine when the cash was being parcelled out, but we are dealing here not with logic, but with the logic of politics.

If logic were at work, we might reasonably ask why Messrs. Ford and Kissinger did not open their campaign for the $222 million until Cambodia's collapse became imminent. Were they asleep at the switch? Didn't they know what was happening?

Of course they knew. They knew that Cambodia was hopeless and knew it was probably hopeless to expect more money from Congress. They surely knew, too, that when the collapse finally came they would be vulnerable to the blind rages of American politics which commonly rouse the electorate when demagogues ask, "Who is to blame for losing our noble ally?"

Their desperate final-hour campaign to get $222 million from Congress was probably little more than political self-defence, a hedge against the inevitable battle cry to get the rascals who lost Cambodia.

The trifling sum — $222 million — was a small inspiration. When Congress refused it, which was always likely, the Administration could come before us from the ruins, point the finger of shame at the wretched misers of Capitol Hill and declare that but for a band of miserable pinchpennies Cambodia would still be unlost on Election Day.

It is not the saving of Cambodia but the making of a campaign issue that now engages the government. Everybody will get elected, or not, depending on how the wind blows, and for a long while no one will come right out and say, "I'd give you one-and-a-half Cambodias for one obsolete Russian submarine any day of the week."

New Hope in Fishermen Mystery

VANCOUVER (CP) — The family and friends of missing Richmond fisherman Tom Goshko and his two sons say there is new evidence about their disappearance.

Goshko, 46, and his sons, Tom, 22, and David, 20, were last seen March 16 when they took on fuel at Tofino.

Their 34-foot herring gillnetter Sylvia II, was found two days later capsized about four miles off Estevan Point, 34 miles northwest of Tofino.

Ed Sopel said he chartered in aircraft for 12 hours and searched over 1,500 miles last weekend.

He said that Goshko was a scuba diver who kept two wet suits and equipment in a special locker in his boat. The equipment was not in the boat when it was towed to shore, he added.

"This missing are three flourescent life-jackets and an unsinkable plastic dinghy which was also painted bright orange."

A rope used to lash the dinghy to the stern of the vessel had been cut.

"Everything indicates that they were able to abandon ship with equipment in an unsinkable dinghy with a capacity for 600 pounds," Sopel said.

He said he would try to interest some Canadian Forces aircraft to continue the search today.

The Sylvia — was the first of 13 boats that have overturned or sunk since the herring season opened March 16. A possible death toll stands at 14.

Convention Centre Claimed Greater Need Than Ferry

Victoria would have been better off it the provincial government had spent $2.4 million on a convention centre instead of buying the Marguerite and docking space, says Eric Charman, new president of the Victoria Real Estate Board.

"All the Marguerite will do is bring day-trippers here in the summer months. A convention centre would help Victoria on a year-around basis."

Charman, installed as president at The Empress today, said the province could salvage some good out of the $2.4 million purchase by using the land as a site for a convention centre.

"The Marguerite simply contributes to the Coney Island atmosphere in the downtown area, which the mayor (Peter Pollen) has quite rightly deplored."

Charman said the public outcry calling for continuation of the Marguerite service demonstrated what a community could achieve when it was united on a project.

However, in the case of the Marguerite the outcry was misdirected.

"It is a matter of priorities. The convention centre could do far more for the city than the Marguerite. It is very short-sighted of the (Victoria) merchants to be concerned about the summer season only."

Charman said a campaign for a convention centre would be one of many projects for the incomin gofficers of the Victoria Real Estate Board.

The projects were not new, but were becoming more urgent each year.

Fundamental to the progress of the capital region, he said, is the amalgamation of the four core municipalities.

Amalgamation would permit united action on such things as convention centres, zoning policies and traffic patterns.

"Traffic is nearing the crisis stage in the capital region. The problem gets worse while the municipalities quarrel among themselves."

On real estate matters, the board would urge municipalities to facilitate construction of apartment units in the region so the supply catches up with the demand. The vacancy rate in the Victoria area is virtually nil and selection is limited.

Charman is beginning his third term as president of the board. He was president in 1972 and 1973. He is owner of Charman Pacific Realty and Featherstone Travel. The travel agency in turn owns Colwood Travel, which opened this month, and James Bay Travel, which opens in June.

Installed along with Charman were vice president John Thomson, past president H. P. R. Brown and directors M. B. Blannin, K. J. Davis, C. L. Fraser, D. G. J. Humphries, Noel Martin, P. F. Mason, L. W. Murray, D. J. Tregear, G. F. Weston and D. G. Whyte.

Canada Blocks 2 Airfare Cuts

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission has prohibited two more U.S. airlines from charging special low fares on flights to Canadian destinations.

Responding to objections from Air Canada, the commission suspended mid-week and off-peak excursion rates for Eastern Air Lines Inc. and Delta Air Lines Inc. Eastern flies from U.S. cities to Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto and Delta flies to Montreal.

Last month the commission announced a similar suspension of special fares for United Air Lines Inc. for flights to Toronto and Vancouver after both Air Canada and CP Air objected.

The three airlines received approval from the U.S. air regulatory agency to charge lower fares on domestic excursion and mid-week flights and sought to extend the fares to flights to Canada.

The commission said it received a complaint from Air Canada, which flies to several U.S. cities, that the lower fares were "unnecessary, inadequately restrictive and will not generate sufficient traffic to offset the revenue loss."

The lower fares were to take effect this month.

Probation For Youth

Nineteen-year-old David Andrew Heslop was granted a conditional discharge in county court today and placed on probation for one year for escaping lawful custody.

Heslop, of 101-1138 Yates, was involved in a fracas with a number of other youths at Dunsmuir junior secondary school in Colwood July 21 during a baseball game.

Complaints of noise and beer drinking brought police and Judge Montague Drake was told today Heslop was fined $500 earlier for obstructing a police officer.

Prosecutor J. W. Anderson said Heslop was arrested and put in a police car but "by some means" got out and was apprehended later.

Judge Drake said the circumstances didn't indicate a particularly bad attitude by Heslop who had realized this was conduct that cannot be condoned.

Tourists Linger

REVISED OFFER FROM B.C. HYDRO

VANCOUVER (CP) — The bargaining committee for 2,500 B.C. Hydro employees who served 72-hour strike notice last Thursday was to meet today to discuss a revised offer from the company.

Douglas Cronk, business agent for International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers local 258, would not divulge B.C. Hydro's latest offer but stressed it was only a revision of a previous position. A company spokesman had no comment.

Cronk would not say whether a strike was imminent for the workers who control the generation, transmission and distribution of electricity in the province. Their two-year contract, which expired March 31, had a base rate of approximately $5.90 an hour for employees.

Sooke Men Capture Raft Race Honors

Two Sooke men — Richie Hamilton and Wayne Stolth — were the big big winners in Sunday's five-mile raft race down the Sooke river.

Their home-made raft made the distance between the Sooke potholes and the Sooke community grounds in just over an hour.

Thirteen teams competed in the event, which was jointly sponsored by the Boy Scouts of Canada, Fourth Juan de Fuca Venture Company, and the Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific.

After them came a First Gary Oak Venture Company crew, an Eighth Douglas Venture Company crew, Paul Bishop and a crew from Sooke, a First Tsartlip Venture Company crew, David Morrow and Dick Barwis of Sooke, a second Fort Victoria Venture Company crew, Mike Allman and David Hymers of Sooke, a First Douglas Venture Compnay crew, a Douglas District Leaders and Council crew, a Victoria Sea Searchers crew, and another crew from the First Gary Oak Venture Company.

The event was a pilot project but a race official said it was so successful it has been decided to hold it annually.

Tacoma Bowler Cooled

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Dave Davis gave a steady performance Saturday to beat pro bowling's hottest performer, Earl Anthony, and take the $10,000 first place prize money in the $80,000 Miller Open bowling tournament.

Davis had entered the nationally televised final round seeded second behind Anthony, of Tacoma. Davis knocked off Anthony, 206-187, in the title game to run his career victory total to 13 and notch his first title win in more than five years. Anthony won $5,500 for his second place finish.

Davis, winner of $23,000 this year, advanced to the championship game with a 214-195 win over Johnny Petraglia. Petraglia, who came in third for $3,500, previously had beaten Ed Ditolla, 191-184.

Ditolla, who finished fourth and earned $2,500, beat Carmen Salvino in the day's opening match, 255-232.

Vernon Wins Hockey Title

Deaths Mar Motor Racing

Times News Services

A motorcycle racer and a stock car driver were killed and two other cyclists were in critical condition following a weekend rash of motor racing accidents.

Marvin LeBlanc, a 49-year-old motorcycle racer from Los Angeles, died after an accident at Riverside racetrack in California, and stock car driver James Rodgers, 54, of Winter Haven, Fla., was killed during a test run at Auburndale Speedway Park in Florida.

Le Blanc was rushed to hospital after his bike collided with another cycle in the Great Bear Grand Prix off-road race. He was pronounced dead at the hospital.

Rodgers was killed when his auto hit the wall on a banked turn on the one-third mile paved track, which opened in October. It was the first fatality at Auburndale Speedway.

Meanwhile in Los Angeles, motorcycle racers Ron Robey and Tom Warren were in hospital in critical condition after an accident at Ascot Speedway.

Tobey, 20 of Bakersfield, Calif., was in the intensive care burn ward and Warren, 21, was under intensive care with spinal and head injuries.

Spokesmen at the track said Tobey's motorcyle grazed the guard rail coming into the front straight, and the fuel tank of his machine exploded when he collided with Warren.

Elsewhere in motor racing, A. J. Foyt collected his 50th victory in national championship racing Sunday, winning the Trenton, N.J., 200 auto race and setting a track record.

Foyt, U.S. Auto Club's all-time leader in career victories, took the lead for the first time on the 21st lap and beat John Rutherford to the wire with a speed of 154.625 miles an hour.

"It's the most important victory of my career," said the 37-year-old driver after two hours, 46 minutes and 39 seconds of thrashing around the five-eighths-mile oval at an average speed of 90.009 miles an hour.

It was Petty's fourth victory in seven outings this year.

Veteran Cale Yarborough finished second followed by Buddy Baker with Dave Marcis in fourth. The fifth-place finisher was Lennie Pond.

Rematch Sought

MILAN, Italy (UPI)—Mexican fighter Valentic Martinez claimed Saturday his 12th-round disqualification in a world light flyweight title bout against Franco Udella of Italy was "a real injustice" and asked for a rematch.

The 29-year-old Mexican flyweight champion was disqualified after 2:56 in the 12th round Friday night for a low blow that sent Udella to the canvas.

Udella was carried out an a stretcher and doctors said they found a red contusion on the skin in the area of his left kidney. The Sardinian boxer was well enough to celebrate at supper with his camp but doctors ordered him to have x-rays at home in Cagliari.

Two Favorites Display Power

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — Heavily favored Czechoslovakia raced away from a first-period tie Sunday and routed the United States 8-3 in a penalty-filled ice hockey match at the world Group A championships.

In another match, the co-favorite Soviet Union defeated Poland 13-2 to stay even with the Czechs on points and ahead on goal totals.

Mare Upsets the Males

Times News Services

La Zanzara, a grey mare bred in England, surprised the males Sunday and became the first of her sex to win the San Juan Capistrano Handicap at Santa Anita since 2949 by beating Astray to the wire in a photo finish.

Jockey Donald Pierce, who had urged trainer Charlie Whittingham to enter the five-year-old in the $125,000 gruelling 1¾-mile grass course marathon, rode the winner. Her stretch drive turned back the 1974 San Juan champion, Astray, by a head.

Carrying the light weight of 114 pounds, including five off because of her sex. La Zanzara won in 2:52 1-5 over a turf course rated as yielding —comparable to slow on the dirt following weekend rain.

The favored Stardust Mel finished third with the long-shot Drollery fourth in the field of 12.

La Zanzara, bred by the Breaulieu stud in England and a daughter of Sea Hawk II, returned $19.,20, $8.60 and $5.40.

Astray, ridden by Jacinto Vasquez and caryring the second-high weight of 125, paid $6.40 and $4.60 while Stardust Mel with Bill Shoemaker riding, paid $3.20.

Promised City overtook the leaders as the field headed home, then held long-shot Bold Chapeau off in the stretch drive Saturday to win the $100,000-added Arkansas Derby at Oaklawn Park in Hot Springs, Ark.

Promised City, trained by former jockey Larry Spraker, was a distant second choice in the wagering to Colonel Power, the runner-up in the recent Louisiana Derby.

Spraker, who rode Swift Ruler to a 1965 Arkansas Derby victory, said Promised City would ship to Churchill Downs and probably have one preprace before the Kentucky Derby.

He said it was likely that Promised City would run in an open allowance race rather than the Steppingstone on the Saturday before the Derby or the Derby Trial on the Tuesday before the classic.

Now that rebates are over, some car manufacturers have found another way to offer you less of a price.

They give you less of a car.

They've taken away some of the things that used to be standard equipment and made them options. Some manufacturers have taken away little things like sports mirrors. Others have taken away big things like steel-belted radial tires.

In either case, if you put back the goodies they took away, the price is right back where it started.

At Fiat, we give you a low price without any gimmickry. The things that make the car perform better, as well as the things that make you feel better, are yours at no extra cost.

Bomb Scare for Cougars

A chartered aircraft carrying the Victoria Cougars and about 20 of their fans was delayed 50 minutes Sunday night because of a bomb scare at Kamloops airport.

The Western Canada Hockey League team and the fans were returning to Victoria after the Cougars defeated Kamloops Chiefs 3-0 to win a best-of-seven quarter-final playoff series 4-2.

Eight RCMP officers from the Kamloops detachment conducted a thorough search of the players' equipment bags before clearing the 48-member Victoria party and a crew of four to take off.

Two fire engines stood by as the Harrison Airways' Corvair 440 finally took off at 12:15 this morning.

RCMP conducting the search said the phone call reporting the bomb "may have been a prank," obviously a Kamloops' hockey fan upset over the Chiefs' loss. Nonetheless, the search was carried out.

The Cats Come Back And So Does Leslie

By ERNIE FEDORUK'
Times Staff

KAMLOOPS — The last time Kamloops fans saw a member of their Western Canada Hockey League team score a goal on Victoria's Bob Leslie, it stirred visions of hope and glory.

Brad Gassoff's sudden goal in overtime on March 30 gave Kamloops Chiefs a 4-3 victory over Victoria Cougars and a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven quarter-final series.

But the Cougars came back, and so did Leslie. Kamloops fans never saw another puck get past Leslie in 73 minutes, 29 seconds.

Coming on the heels of Saturday's 3-2 triumph before a record crowd of 5,327 fans in Victoria's Memorial Arena, Cougars' 4-2 series victory sends the Pat Ginnell-coached team into the Western Division final against New Westminster Bruins.

The Bruins cleared their first-round hurdle, 4-1, when centre Fred Berry scored at 2:11 of sudden-death overtime to give Westminster a 5-4 victory over Medicine Hat Tigers on Sunday.

At the same time, Saskatoon Blades edged closer to a berth in the Eastern Division final by dumping Brandon Wheat Kings 6-4 behind the three-goal performance of Bernie Federko. Saskatoon leads the series 3-1l.

First game in the Westminster-Victoria series may open Thursday in Memorial Arena. Dates for the series are to be finalized today.

After Kamloops won the first two games, 6-4 and 4-3, Leslie was benched in favor of rookie Jerry Simpson. Simpson went all the way as the Cougars started their comeback with a 7-2 victory. He also started a game in Kamloops last Thursday which the Cougars won 5-3.

Simpson pulled a hamstring muscle at 6:31 of the third period here last Thursday, and Leslie rushed back into service. He blanked the Chiefs for the remaining 13 minutes, 29 seconds, looked even better in Saturday's outing at Memorial Arena, and grew hotter Sunday.

He had some luck and excellent defensive backing, but his second shutout of the season was much of his own doing.

He took particular delight in robbing Darryl Ferner — four times. Leslie also made sparkling saves to frustrate Terry McDonald, Don Moores, Neil Lyseng and Mal Zinger.

Mel Bridgman, Al Hill and Dan Lucas handled Sunday's scoring. Bridgman's game-winner was his seventh of the series — all on power plays — and his 100th goal as a Cougar.

Leslie also played a prominent role in that one, making 41 saves.

Saturday's nose count established a record for junior hockey in Victoria. The previous high, 5,219, came to a 1970 B.C. Junior League playoff against Vernon Essos.

The all-time high at Memorial Arena is 5,433, set Jan. 25, 1958, during a Western (professional) Hockey League game between Victoria and Edmonton Flyers.

Both weekend games were marred by outbreaks of violence which also involved fans. Kamloops' Dave Hatheway tangled with a Victoria fan behind the Chiefs' bench on Saturday.

Two Kamloops fans started fighting Sunday after one of them yanked a Cougar player's helmet.

After the initial outbreak Saturday, teams confined their activities to hockey. There were only three minor penalties called by referee Al Paradise during the final 50 minutes.

Kamloops' goalie Mark Earp and Gustafson touched off Sunday's fireworks. Earp slashed Gustafson and a fight started after the Victoria player retaliated.

Irv Bowles of Victoria and Barry Melrose of Kamloops were slapped with game misconducts for coming off the bench, a call that didn't sit too well with Kamloops coach Harvey Roy.

He added to a 15-minute delay by yanking the Chiefs off the ice. The team returned about two minutes later.

Flyers Earn Home Edge For the Playoff 'Season'

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

By The Canadian Press

The National Hockey League's 720-game schedule concluded Sunday night and for six teams, it was the end of a long year.

But for the 12 teams that qualified for the Stanley Cup playoffs, it's like starting all over.

The Rangers closed out their season Sunday by dropping a 6-4 decision to New York Islanders, who they will meet in the first game of their best-of-three first-round series Tuesday night.

In other Sunday action, Philadelphia Flyers clinched the best over-all record in the league by downing Atlanta Flames 6-2, Montreal Canadiens topped Detroit Red Wings 4-2, Boston Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs played to a 4-4 tie, Chicago Black Hawks blanked Minnesota North Stars 3-0, St. Louis Blues topped Kansas City Scouts 3-2, Los Angeles Kings and California Seals played to a 1-1 tie and Washington Capitals bombed Pittsburgh Penguins 8-4.

Saturday night, Buffalo Sabres topped Toronto 4-2, Los Angeles defeated the Seals 5-3, Montreal thrashed Washington 10-2, Pittsburgh downed Detroit 7-1, St. Louis nipped Chicago 4-3 and the Flyers defeated the Islanders 4-1.

Both the Islanders and Rangers finished the season with 88 points but the Rangers get second place in the Patrick Division sbecause they had 37 wins compared with 33 for their crosstown rivals.

This is the ninth consecutive year the Rangers have made it to post-season play while the three-year-old Islanders are making their first appearance.

The Canadiens are nursing a few injuries including Yvan Cournoyer's sore groin and Murray Wilson's damaged knee ligaments and thus do not mind the brief rest.

Serge Savard scored twice for the Canadiens to become the 10th Montreal player to score at least 20 goals this season.

Bobby Orr scored two goals and assisted on Don Marcotte's game-tying effort to increase his league-leading points total to 135. Orr finished with 46 goals and 89 assists for 135 points, eight ahead of teammate Phill Esposito.

Billy Reay got his 500th coaching win and Tony Esposito posted his sixth shutout of the year as the Black Hawks blanked the North Stars. However the Blues managed to nip the Scouts to finish in second place in the Smythe Division with 84 points, two less than Vancouver and two more than Chicago.

The Capitals finished the season with eight wins, 67 losses and five ties for 21 points, the worst record since the Islanders 12-60-6 mark in their first season. Washington established a league mark for mediocrity with one win and 39 losses on the road.

Hull, Lacroix Snap Records

By The Canadian Press

The World Hockey Association's regular season all but ended Sunday with Bobby Hull and Andre Lacroix both finishing with scoring records.

The season officially ends tonight with a meaningless game between Houston Aeros and Baltimore Blades.

In Sunday's final games, the 5-5 overtime tie at Winnipeg had little to contribute to the final standings but it contained the final battle for the scoring records.

Hull scored his record 77th goal of the season for Winnipeg Jets against San Diego Mariners while the Mariner's Andre Lacroix wound up his league scoring title with 41 goals and a record 106 assists.

Hull's goal scoring surpassed the pro hockey record of 76 scored by Phil Esposito of the National Hockey League Boston Bruins in the 1970-71 season.

In that same season, Esposito's team-mate Bobby Orr had the pro record of 102 assists in one season which Lacroix surpassed by four.

In other games Sunday, Houston Aeros beat Toronto Toros 5-2, Minnesota Fighting Saints defeated Baltimore 6-5, Vancouver Blazers beat Indianapolis Racers 4-3 and Edmonton Oilers beat Chicago Cougars 6-3.

SHOT IN THE ARM FOR WLA

By STEWART LANG
Times Staff

Like other teams in the league, Victoria Shamrocks were hurt when the professional National Lacrosse League began siphoning players out of the Western Lacrosse Association.

But now, if current negotiations prove fruitful, some of those players and others from eastern Canada and the United States might be returning to the fold.

And if the current labor dispute in Victoria lasts until May 21, Shamrocks may be communting to Bellingham for their "home" games.

Roy Burton, Island commissioner for the WLA, said Sunday that negotiations were now going on with the professional league for the return of unsigned players.

"They will be returning as league — not team — property," said Burton. He added that the players wouldn't be released until the National League was held its draft session April 14.

Burton stressed that this move won't turn the WLA into a "farm" or "development" league for the professional loop but will simply serve as a mechanism for releasing unsigned players.

"The situation will be clarified next week," he added.

Players acquired from the NLL will be assigned to the various WLA clubs. Burton explained there won't be a draft of these players for two reasons. Some of the players are unknown as far as playing ability is concerned and former WLA players will probably — but not definitely — be returned to their old teams.

Meanwhile, the Shamrocks are preparing for the possibility of a long CUPE strike.

"Should the CUPE situation still exist on May 21, when Shamrocks are scheduled to play their home opener, there is a strong possibility Bellingham will be used as their home arena," said Burton.

Bellingham applied to join the WLA this season but was turned down when its privately-owned area ran into financial difficulties. The city took over the facility last Thursday and is now looking for bookings.

Island lacrosse fans will get their first chance to see Nanaimo Timbermen the newest WLA entry, and Shamrocks in action when the two teams clash in an exhibition game April 26 in the new arena at Parksville.

Weiskopf Cruises At Greensboro

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Tom Weiskopf crushed the hopes of any contenders with an eagle three on the ninth hole and cruised to a three-stroke victory Sunday in the Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament.

Weiskopf scored his first victory since the banner season of 1973 with a final-round 68 in chilly, breezy weather and finished four tours over the 6,643-yard Sedgefield Country Club course with 275, nine under par.

Weiskopf, leader since his opening round of 64, collected $45,000 from the $225,000 purse for his 10th official tour triumph — which does not include such 1973 triumphs as the British Open and the World Series of Golf title.

The win stamped him as a prime candidate for the famed green jacket that goes to the winner of next week's Master's tournament.

Weiskopf has never won that tournament but has finished second three times.

In this one, Weiskopf holed a 50-foot sidehill putt for the clinching eagle on the ninth hole. That gave him a commanding six-shot lead.

Jerry McGee — aided by Weiskopf bogeys on the 13th and 14th — crept within two shots of the lead on the back nine, however. But McGee hit it into the water on the 17th for a double bogey six and his chance was gone.

Rands Takes Playoff With a Clutch Putt

By D'ARCY KAVANAGH
Times Staff

Gordie Rands of Cedar Hill Municipal Golf Club sank a three-foot putt on the second hold of sudden-death play to take top honors Sunday in the qualifying round of the annual CFAX Island Open at Gorge Vale.

Tied after 18 holes at 73 with defending champion Cec Ferguson and Bob Beauchemin of the host club, and Victoria Golf Club assistant pro Doug Mahovlic, Rands drilled his tee shot wide of the green on the 177-yard, par-three second hole. He then chipped three feet from the hole and made the winning putt.

The other three contenders managed bogeys, but Mahovlic took second on a draw.

Grant Milliken of Gorge and veteran pro Bill Wakeham of Cowichan, a three-time winner of the Island crown, were one stroke behind with 74s.

The 32 qualifiers from both the medalist and handicap flights will open match play next Sunday at Uplands.

Top player in the handicap division was Tom Murray of the host club, who shot an 80 and finished with a net 70.

Nanaimo, third-place finisher in the regular schedule, upset first-place London Boxing Club 2-1 and now meets UVic Vikings in next Saturday's final at Athletic Park beginning at 2:15 p.m.

Vikings defeated Victoria West 4-2 Saturday at Athletic Park in the other semi-final. Vikings were second in the standings.

Ray Telford shot Nanaimo into a 1-0 half-time lead Sunday with a goal at 20 minutes on which Boxing Club netminder Kjeld Brodsgaard was screened. Ray Clarke's goal two minutes into the second half, which slipped in off Brodsgaard's hands, put the winners ahead 2-0.

Nationals In B.C.

HALIFAX — Wilf Sadler of Victoria, who represents B.C. on the national executive committee of the Canadian Soccer Association, said Sunday night the national team will be based in Vancouver while preparing for the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

The NEC endorsed a recommendation by national coach Eckhardt Crautzman that the national team be located on the west coast where they could train with Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American League.

A three man committee composed of Aubrey Sanford of Vancouver and Jim Hubay and Bruce Thomas of Ontario was appointed "to come up with an agreement to satisfy both the NEC and Whitecaps," said Sadler.

Other Island sides fell by the wayside in Saturday quarter-finals.

Chris Evert Captures Tennis Title

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Top-seeded Chris Evert of the United States battering away at challenger Martina Navratilova's backhand, won the Women's Pro tennis championship, 6-4, 6-2, Saturday at the Los Angeles Sports Arena.

Miss Evert needed only one hour, six minutes to dispose of the left-hander from Czechoslovakia, who alternated firing back at Miss Evert from the baseline and rushing the net.

Miss Evert won $40,000, highest prize ever paid in a women's tennis tournament, and Miss Navratilova received $25,000.

The prize boosted Miss Evert's 1975 winnings to $121,450.

In the earlier consolation match to decide third place in the double round robin tournament, Virginia Wade of England won the pro set, 8-5, over Evonne Goolagong of Australia. Mrs. Wade was awarded $13,500 and Miss Goolagong $11,500.

BLAZERS TAKE OPENER

LANGLEY (CP) — Bellingham Blazers took a 1-0 lead in their best-of-three British Columbia Junior Hockey championship Sunday, defeating Coquitlam Comets 3-1.

The Tier Two series between Coquitlam, the Pacific Junior Hockey League champions, and Bellingham, the B.C. Junior Hockey League winners, is to decide the provincial representative in the Centennial Cup playoffs.

Doug Sweeting gave Coquitlam an early lead, and it lasted until 8:22 of the second period when Blazers tied the game on a goal from Don Hobbins. Randy Rudnyk and Stan Smyl scored the two other Bellingham goals.

Another Setback To Aztecs

EVERETT, Wash. (ap) — Midfielder Bernie Fagen scored late in the first half for Seattle Saturday night and it proved to be the only goal of the contest as the Sounders opened their North American soccer league exhibition season with a 1-0 victory over Los Angeles Aztecs.

Fagen's goal, on the heels of a Sounders penalty kick that was blocked, went into the Aztecs' net with 33:27 gone in the first half.

The Sounders had been awarded a penalty shot when Aztecs were called for controlling the ball with their hands. The blocked shot was controlled by Seattle and after two unsuccessful shots at the net, Fagen, on a setup by Roy Sinclair, botted it past Aztec goalie Gary Allison.

Los Angeles, defending league champion, opened its season the previous night in Victoria with a 2-1 loss to the Vancouver Whitecaps.

Storms Hit Baseball Openers

By The Associated Press

Baseball's 1975 season, battling hectic early April weather and arriving just as the hockey and basketball playoffs begin, got started with four games today.

Midwest storms have postponed two of Tuesday's openers, forcing Pittsburgh's game at Chicago back to Wednesday and delaying Baltimore at Detroit until Thursday.

By then, the season will be well under way. It began in Cincinnati where Los Angeles Dodgers battled the Reds in a matchup of National League West title contenders.

Cincinnati, which finished four games back of the NL champion Dodgers last year, will face Los Angeles seven times in the new season's first 10 days and the NL West pattern could be established in those two series.

After watching the Dodgers and Reds, baseball commisioner Bowie Kuhn was to rush to St. Louis to attend the night opener at Busch Stadium between the Cardinals and Montreal Expos.

The National League's other opener today was in Houston's Astrodome with Atlanta Braves facing the Astros.

The American League's League's 75th season got started in California this afternoon with the Angeles' Nolan Ryan facing Steve Busby for Kansas City Royals.

Fantasticks Well-Done Fun

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

If The Fantasticks is well done it is fun, it is charming and musically speaking has an interesting and appealing score.

The Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt musical is at the McPherson Playhouse this week. Bastion Theatre's production is the third one in this city in a decade, and it is very well done.

Of its many virtues an outstanding one is the orchestra. Tucked into the wings on stage it consists of highly competent pianist Peter Yakimovich who is musical director of the show; Charlotte Moon, harp; Don Beale, bass, and Chris Howells, percussion.

This small efficient group provides all that the show needs in the way of spirit, character, rhythmic security and lyricism.

It's a love story, a sort of Romeo and Juliet in reverse with two happy endings, one for each act. In between are connivings and complications that permit the writers to make some ingenuous and rather obvious comments about life "out there."

"What happened to you?" asks the girl at the end when the boy returns, battered and weary, form his journey out there.

"The world happened to me," he replies.

Ed Kotanen's design of the stage withing a stage is tawdrily attractive, well lit and works well for the actors. Director Edwin Stephenson makes the best possible use of it, working every available area into a well devised pattern of mood and action.

The cast is an ensemble in which there is no disturbing weakenss and much strength.

John Heath, for instance, supple and delicately precise as the Mute who is everywhere and everything to everyone — a stylish performance.

And Bill Cole, who plays the Narrator (El Gallo) with a flourish, a true feeling for the role's several values and a genuine sophistication.

Cole sings very well, a fact made clear at the outset with his persuasive performance of the familiar and haunting song, Try to Remember. And with the assisatance of some very effective lighting he easily achieves the compelling, at times hypnotic, quality the role demands.

Marie Baron's pretty voice and air of dewy innocence is wholly pleasing and with Hank Stinson, who sings and acts so remarkably well, the boy-and-girl scenes have a charming freshness.

The fathers, Grant Cowan and Peter Mannering, Charles Palmer as a rather pathetic run-down actor, and particularly Al Kozlik as his companion whose specialty is dying, are all thoroughly satisfying.

'NO SOCRED CHANGES'

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — The Social Credit party has provided the Liberals with plenty of issues for the next provincial election campaign because it hasn't changed, Liberal leader David Anderson said Sunday.

"The memory of the Socreds is still very, very clear," he told a Comox riding nominating convention.

"They have not changed one bit. The old guard is still there. They cannot tell you just because they named the son of the former premier as the new leader that they are a brand-new crowd."

The Liberal leader said the ruling New Democratic Party has also given the Liberals issues to fight the next election whenever it is called.

"If there was ever a time for common sense and a moderate approach to government, that time is now," he said.

The convention nominated banker Norman McLaren, 37, of Campbell River, to contest the Vancouver Island constituency now held by Karen Sanford.

On Saturday, Anderson told a Vancouver audience the government should help guarantee women's rights by increasing the staff of the human rights commission which, he said, doesn't have enough workers to serve cases outside Victoria and Vancouver.

Talks to Set Fuel Price Hike

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Canadians can expect an increase in their cost-of-living as a result of the outcome of the federal-provincial conference on energy and the economy set for Wednesday and Thursday in the government's conference centre here.

Their fuel oil, gasoline and natural gas prices will go up later this year.

The first day of the conference Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and the 10 premiers of the provinces will present their position papers. The conference is expected to agree to that session being open to the press and televised.

The price and distribution of oil and natual gas will come under discussion. During the second day the conference will get around to discussing the state of the economy and hear a report from Finance Minister John Turner.

But the eyeball to eyeball confrontations will take place over attempts to reach a compromise on a new higher price for oil.

The two Conservative premiers are on opposite sides of the fence at this summit meeting. Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta — an oil producing province — is determined to get his province a higher price for its oil. Premier William Davis of Ontario — a heavy oil consuming province — is equally determined that prices be held down.

Prime Minister Trudeau and his federal officials are talking in terms of a $2 a barrel increase in oil prices, up from the current $6.50. But they might have to compromise at a price around $9.

The oil price increase will be reflected throughout the economy in increased costs of production. It will mean higher prices all along the line. But Canadians have been getting by with lower priced oil than the rest of the world because of the subsidy arrangement in effect for a year and a half. That agreement with the petroleum industry and producing provinces will terminate at the end of June.

LEWISVILLE, Tex. — City manager Johnny Sartain has kept a sub-machine gun near his city hall desk ever since marijuana-puffing, long-haired youths cavorted naked at rock music festival outside town six years ago. The gun, kept under his City Hall desk in this Dallas suburb, is a "good backup" in case "the police station is stormed during a riot," he says.

★

HONOLULU — Hawaii's flags flew at half mast today to honor John Burns, a three-time governor who calmed anti-Japanese hysteria during the Second World War and became the architect of the island chain's statehood. Gov. George Ariyoshi ordered a 30-day mourning period for the state's most powerful democrat, who died Saturday after a long battle with cancer at age 66.

★

LONDON — James Stewart makes his London stage debut today at the age of 65 in Harvey. Stewart will appear in one of his favorite roles — Elwood Dowd, the gentle alcoholic whose friend is a giant white rabbit visible only to him.

The play, in which Stewart first starred on Broadway in 1947 and then in the film in 1950, received ovations in private previews last week.

MECHANICSBURG, Pa. — Entertainer Tiny Tim was injured Sunday in a three-car auto accident in which a man was killed and four other persons injured, police said. Tiny Tim is in satisfactory condition at hospital in nearby Camp Hill with chest injuries.

Police said Tim was a passenger in a car driven by his manager, James Cappelluzzo, 44, who was also injured and in satisfactory condition.

Police said they did not know what caused the crash.

Fast for Vote

NEW DELHI (AP) — Former deputy prime minister Morarji Desai began a fast Monday in an attempt to force Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to hold early elections in his home state of Gujarat.

Stuntman . . . toppling from ladder

His Last Stunt Was Fatal

BUNNELL, Fla. — Aerial stuntman Dominick Giandomenico, standing in a convertible going close to 100 miles per hour, was having trouble catching a rope-ladder dangling from a low-flying airplane piloted by his brother-in-law.

Winds in excess of 20 mph made the attempts to pick up the stuntman hazardous Saturday.

"The wind's a little bit strong, it's a little bit risky," the public address announcer at the Sunny Days festival air show said after one attempt failed.

Giandomenico, 26, of Boca Raton, Fla., finally caught the ladder despite the stiff winds and began climbing the rungs toward the plane. He was about 50 feet above the ground when he lost his grip and fell to his death in a field.

A crowd of 4,000 persons including his wife Jessica gasped and screamed.

An official of the Flagler county sheriff's office who arrived at the accident scene said Giandomenico was "motionless, lifeless — it looked as if he died on impact."

The pilot, national acrobatic champion William Lumley, landed immediately after his brother-in-law fell from the ladder.

He declined comment on the incident.

Mike Losey, one of the spectators, said Giandomenico was stuck on the first step of the ladder after the stuntman had caught it.

"They flew around for five or 10 minutes and the announcer said Giandomenico must be tired because he was supposed to climb the ladder," he said. "He had his feet on the bottom rung, but he couldn't get any higher. He was just holding on."

Emmett Tally, head of Birdman Aircraft Inc. of Daytona Beach, said the stunt Giandomenico was attempting was "one of the most dangerous stunts there is."

BACK-TO-NATURE DIET CANCELLED

GLOUCESTER, England — The wrath of nature lovers has forced cancellation of an experiment in which six schoolgirls and their biology teacher planned to try to live for a week by eating mice, sparrows, hedghogs and starlings.

In announcing that the project had been called off, the instructor, Peter Driver, said people mistakenly thought the group was going to eat nothing but animals during the experiment.

"We would also have eaten plants such as sorrell, chick weed and crab apples," he said.

Driver said the experiment had been planned to show the students how to live off the land.

"In the event of a world disaster, it would be the way everyone would have to live and people should be shown how to cope" he said.

But conservationists complained that similar projects might be carried out and that endangered species might be all eaten up.

Anne Falls Off Horse

MARLBOROUGH, England — Princess Anne was thrown from her horse into a river at a weekend equestrian competition.

The 24-year-old princess was doing well on a cross-country course when she was thrown from her horse Mardi Gras into the River Avon, only three feet deep at that point.

She dropped out of the cross-country but was unhurt and continued in the later competition at Rushall, near this southern English town.

WORKING CLASS LAUDED

SUDBURY, Ont. — Federal NDP Leader David Lewis says the working class has allowed itself to be brainwashed.

He told a Sudbury district labor dinner that working people must become aware that there is a ruling class in this society — 946 members of a "top elite" who sit as directors on a number of corporations and use all their power to retain what they have.

"How do you expect parties which get financing from corporations to kick them in the teeth?" he asked. "The working people of this country need thier own political instrument."

The NDP leader also said he will work in a university after his retirement — "teaching . . . studying . . . and having some time to sit back and think."

Alfa Romeo. For people who thought they'd never fall in love again.

The first Alfas were created by love. Conceived in the hearts and minds of a small band of enthusiasts in 1909. Today's Alfa Romeo evolved as those dedicated men built and raced their cars for the love of it. Everything they learned in over 60 years of building racing and production cars has gone into them. The Alfa Romeo 2000 series comes in three models. The 2000 Spider convertible for those who want to follow the sun. For the GT enthusiast there's the GTV coupe, one of the world's truly inspired grand touring designs. And for those who need space without sacrificing pace there's the 2000 Berlina, a superb road car with room for the family.

Each Alfa starts with a light, powerful 2-litre double overhead cam engine, that provides exciting performance with remarkably low fuel consumption. This masterpiece is made even better with Alfa Romeo's own Spica fuel injection system which gives a smooth idle and instant throttle response on regular gas. The transmission is something special too. It's a 5-speed unit that'll whisk you smoothly to 60 mph in less than 10 seconds. But when it's time to bring speed to a quick stop the power-assisted, dual circuit disc brakes on all 4 wheels do just that. As reported in E.P.A. Consumer Aid Series, an Alfa brakes from 80 m.p.h. to a full stop in 278 ft. making it number one in the world. And Alfa Romeo's superb road-holding qualities, aided by a limited slip differential, are an indisputable fact.

Alfa's special appeal goes deeper than a beautiful body. Contoured seats cradle you softly but firmly. The controls are stainless steel, the trim genuine mahogany. And carpeting everywhere, including the trunk. As well, an electrically heated rear window and a heater/ventilation system that's comfortable in any climate make an Alfa interior a nice place to be.

Backing up this beauty is the heart of a great tradition. Alfas are built by people, not machines. And these people make every production step a labour of love. Every part, for example, is examined before an engine is assembled. And there are 32 more quality checks before that engine is fitted to the car. Attention to detail follows this love affair in every way. Alfa Romeo people even spend hours on a pre-delivery inspection before they deliver your new Alfa. After delivery, they'll have the time to talk to you, take an interest in you and make sure your love for your Alfa lasts.

Choppers Swarm City Skies

Belonging to the 540th Aviation Company of the Washington Army National Guard in Tacoma, the "choppers" were returning from a two-day international exercise, Rambling Rose, in which Victoria and Vancouver militia units took part.

Also participating were members of the B.C. Regiment (Duke of Connaught's Own), Royal Canadian Armored Corps, of Vancouver.

Third in a series, the exercise was the largest of its kind on Vancouver Island.

That Kindly Last Word: An Obit Writer's Memory

No assessment of the magnificent hypocrisy of the newspaper obituary should even begin without the reminder that we've come a long way, baby.

There was a time when, apart from the classified death notice, newspapers ran column upon column of editorial obituaries. Any impressionable reader might mourn daily the passing of so many splendid men and even, occasionally, women. Then, as now, we simply never recorded the demise of a single creep, jerk or fink. Everybody who died, as far as the newspapers were concerned, was fitted with a halo.

We're much more selective, now. The editorial obituary is reserved for those who, for one reason or another, have been in the public eye. The hypocrisy is thus limited, though hardly eliminated.

I noticed the other day in one of the Vancouver papers, for example, a final eulogy to a certain tycoon whose career I've followed for 30-odd years. He made his millions as a slum landlord, in just barely legal financial manipulations, in some of the most ruthless, cold-blooded, heartless rip-offs ever perpetrated in the western world. Yet here he was, enshrined in type, the "prominent business-man," a great loss to the community, etc., etc.

If I smiled fondly at this old-fashioned exercise in semantics rather than reacting with the fury that it invited, it can be explained only by the fact that my baptismal year in the newspaper business was spent almost entirely as an obit writer. Every newsroom had one in those days. It was the accepted way for a young reporter to get his spurs. You were given a list of undertakers. You phoned them each day for their contributions. "Hi, Mr. Hanna. Jack Scott here. And who have we got today?"

The name of the game was to find something — anything — that would make the dear departed look saintly. You might know that the dear departed had been an unmitigated scoundrel, an exploiter of widows and orphans and all-round swindler, but your only concern was to confer that brief immortality of the obit.

"Prominent businessman" was, of course, often the euphemism for a lifetime of dirty dealing, but it had a nice ring to it and could be used at least once every day.

If you already had a "prominent businessman" you might find it useful to use the description "well-known sportsman," often meaning only that the dear departed had had a piece of the action in commercial sports or had been a long-time member of the city's most exclusive golf club, sometimes head of the committee given the job of keeping out the Jews.

Another handy device was to describe the charitable work of the subject. Surprisingly often, prominent businessmen were very active in charitable groups as the alternative to giving them money.

You were home free, of course, if you could find any connection with a recognized church, in which case the man became "prominent churchman" and this, as the undertakers particularly knew, was the complete answer to any sins the dear departed might have committed in any other way.

Curiously enough, I never became cynical about any of this. When I graduated to the sterner stuff of reporting I rather missed the obituaries. I could say truthfully that I had never failed to find good in a man, or, at least, to find something that looked good.

It wasn't until years later that I heard the story of a man who simply could not be made to look good and I've often wondered how I would have tackled the obituary.

My wife and I were in Hollywood where I was to do a series of interviews. We were guests on the set where Clark Gable was working on one of his last pictures. At the noon break we were invited to lunch with him in the MGM studio commissary (he picked away distastefully at a salad without dressing, fighting his weight problem) and found him to be a most engaging, articulate man.

Gable and the others at the table talked almost exclusively about a top executive of the studio who had died the previous week from a massive coronary. He had been, it seemed, one of the most hated men in the film industry, a man who had reached the pinnacle over the bodies of uncounted producers, directors and actors he had sacrificed for his own career.

Such was the man's reputation, Gable recalled, that when the studio's press department was asked to prepare an obituary for release to the papers they could not find a single person who would say a kind word. Gable, himself, had simply declined comment.

Finally someone in the press department remembered that, for at least a dozen years, the executive had visited the studio's barber shop where a man named Frank had given him a shave each morning. If nothing else there was a chance here for the folksy touch that might rescue them.

Several members of the press department hurried to the barber's chair. They told Frank of their mission. The barber then recounted, in great detail, his own detestation of the executive. He had never left a tip in all those years, not even a "thank you," had never, in fact, said a civil word.

"We know all that, Frank," the press department head said. "All we want is some small tribute from you."

As Gable told the story, the barber thought for a very long time and then his face took on a beatific smile. The press department men leaned forward expectantly, their pencils poised above their notebooks.

"I can say one thing for him," the barber said, at last. "He was not a hard man to shave."

TIGHT MONEY SITUATION BLAMED

Two Schools Shelved at UVic

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Times Staff

The proposed schools of nursing and social work at the University of Victoria, scheduled to open in September, have been shelved for at least a year.

The decision was made Saturday at a meeting of UVic president Dr. Howard Petch and faculty deans and was blamed on a shortage of money.

About 45 applications would have been accepted for the new programs, and more than 500 inquiries had already been made, a university spokesman said.

The tight-money situation exists despite a provincial grant increase of 30.8 per cent this year.

Static student fees, little money carry-over from last year, and salary conversion costs combined to bring the working capital increase down to 20 per cent, Petch said.

The new law school will take a portion of that 20 per cent and so will faculty and staff salary increases, and costs of more staff hired to handle this year's extra students.

An education faculty primary school internship program slated for September will also be postponed, Petch said.

There will likely be other cuts to be decided at departmental levels.

Directors for both new schools have already been hired, and they will come to UVic as planned for a year's preparation before classes begin.

The proposed nursing program was aimed at working nurses who have diplomas but wish academic upgrading for a B.Sc. degree.

Social work was to be a fifth year program for graduate students. A planned introductory course in social work for undergraduates will likely still be offered.

Schools Set Full Days

Most Greater Victoria schools will be back to a full school day on Tuesday, and most high schools by Wednesday, school board spokesman Bill Stavdal said today.

All classes in district schools ended at noon today, he said, so janitors and maintenance workers would have this afternoon to sweep the schools, clear up litter and restore floor surfaces.

All elementary schools with no serious cleanup problems, about two-thirds of them, will be open Tuesday for a full day. The others will begin the full day Wednesday.

High schools will continue on the three-hour day Tuesday, and return to normal hours Wednesday, he said.

Stavdal said principals have been asked to assess the scholastic status of their students to see if there is need for remedial instruction, such as late afternoon, evening, weekend or summer tutoring.

Schools have been operating on a reduced school day since early March because of a strike of district custodians and maintenance workers, Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Local 382 decided Friday night to return to work today.

Pollen, Walker Agree on Ch. 10

Mayor Peter Pollen and Jim Walker, head of the Canadian Union of Public Employees bargaining committee, agree on one issue—that Channel 10 should not be allocated to commercial interests.

Charles Barber, chairman of Publicair, a group organizing a petition to be presented to the Canadian Radio-Television Commission when it meets April 22 in Vancouver, said today both Pollen and Walker have agreed to be Publicair sponsors.

"At least they have that in common," Barber said.

Volunteers are circulating a petition downtown and in shopping centres for the next two weeks, asking people to oppose allocation of the channel to a commercial company.

More than 1,000 have already signed the petition, which asks the CRTC to commit the channel to public and educational broadcasting.

Camosun To Ratify Agreement

Camosun College council is expected to ratify tonight its first collective agreement with Local 947 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

The proposed contract gives the 62 clerical workers a 96-cent-an-hour, across-the-board raise, an average salary hike of 22 per cent.

The contract, already ratified by CUPE, runs from January 1975 to March 31, 1976.

However, salary clauses of the contract are to be renegotiated this month for possible upward adjustments if other CUPE locals in the region win higher wage settlements.

Camosun has kept its negotiations with CUPE separate from those of the employers' regional bargaining group so it hasn't been involved in the current stikes and lockouts in the region.

Local 947 vice-president John Kendall said today he expects any new wage hikes negotiated will be minor.

The local represents more than 200 greater Victoria school board clerical staff as well as the Camosun workers, and before this the Camosun workers always negotiated jointly with the school board workers.

Gov't Union Completes First Talks

The B.C. Government Employees' Union and the provincial government officially completed their first round of bargaining today with the signing of the last component wage contract.

The social and health services component of the union, representing 1,500 employees, this weekend voted 79 per cent in favor of ratifying its first individual contract.

Official signing of the contract was to take place in Victoria today.

The social services component is the last of 13 groups within the BCGEU to negotiate its first wage contract with the government.

Under the two-tiered system of bargaining established under 1973 legislation, the union first negotiated a master contract covering basic fringe benefits and working conditions for all 35,000 union members.

Since then each component group has bargained separately for individual wage agreements.

Details of all the component wage agreements have officially been kept secret by both the government and the union but now that the last contract has been signed, details are expected to be released shortly.

A study of orders-in-council approving new wage schedules for the first component settlements indicate the salary increases may run as high as 56 per cent for some junior employees.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall, who still refused to supply detailed salary figures despite release of those figures, said the percentage figures are "fatuous" because emphasis of the wage settlements has been to bring civil servants up to a level comparable with other sectors of the economy.

With the first round of bargaining completed, the government and the BCGEU are expected to begin the process again next month when they open talks for their second master agreement.

Fishboats Attract Hundreds

More than 50 trollers belonging to members of the Pacific Trollers Association jammed the Causeway jetties and the inner reaches of the harbor.

The fleet was blessed by Father Ray Cunningham and Rev. Trevor Williams. Mayor Peter Pollen then invited people to accept the salmon fishermen's invitation to go aboard.

People were shown the sophisticated electronic gear used to locate fish and other equipment used in the industry.

Providing music for the four-hour event was the band of the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps.

Esquimalt MP Donald Munro was among those attending.

The trolling season opens April 15.

Cruiser Damaged in Chase

About $1,000 damage was caused to a Victoria city police car Sunday night when it collided with a stolen car it was chasing.

Police spotted a car, reported stolen earlier Sunday evening, heading south on Douglas. Two marked police vehicles pursued the car which ran 13 red lights at an estimated speed of 60 miles per hour.

The car was overtaken by one police vehicle near Beacon Avenue. The driver of the stolen car slammed on his brakes. The other police vehicle tried to avoid collision but hit the stolen car from behind.

There were no injuries.

Yarrows Supervisory Union Held to Joint Bargaining

The recently-certified union of supervisory personnel at Yarrows shipyard must bargain in conjunction with all other unions in the plant, the Labor Relations Board has ruled.

The board also ruled that 15 foremen at the shipyard who have the right to fire, suspend and discipline other employees cannot be considered as "employees" under the B.C. Labor Code and therefore cannot be a part of the union.

The board, in its decisions, upheld an earlier decision which had been appealed by the union, the Association of Commercial and Technical Employees. (ACTE).

The union was certified at Yarrows in July, 1974, but the certification order included the decision that ACTE must conduct its bargaining in conjunction with the other Yarrows unions which belong to the Joint Shipyard Conference.

The board also ruled at that time that the foremen could not belong to the union, a decision that ACTE also appealed.

In its appeal decision, the LRB member pointed out that people in industry with the title "foremen" are normally eligible for union membership, but, the board found, the Yarrows foremen are "an arm of management" and cannot be included in the union certification.

The exclusion of the foremen from the union brings its members down from about 23 people to only eight.

The union argued that it should not have to bargain with the other unions because it was improper that supervisors should have their terms and conditions set by a council which is dominated by the employees they supervise.

Supervisors were first entitled to form unions and bargain collectively under a clause in the B.C. Labor Code, brought in by the NDP government.

Since that time, supervisory units have run into trouble in deciding just who should and who should not be members of the union.

Yarrows shipyard was plagued by labor troubles until the joint shipyard conference was formed to bargain for all unions in 1966.

Shipyard conference chairman Jim McAvoy argued that if ACTE was left out of the conference, other unions would also want to leave it and bargain on their own, bringing about further labor unrest. The board agreed and ruled that ACTE must act in concert with other unions.

City Women's Day March

elizabeth forbes

When I saw a press release, awhile back, that told of a parade of men and women down New York's Fifth Avenue, to celebrate the first International Women's Day, I couldn't help feeling a bit regretful that Victoria didn't (or couldn't) stage something the same.

Now it looks as if such a happening might (just might) take place here, in mid-April.

That is, if what I read in a current issue of The Women's Centre newsletter, materializes.

The proposed event is not being planned to remember International Women's Day. Rather, it has to do with the British Columbia Federation of Women, founded a year ago "to unite women's organizations and individual women to serve as a communication link among women of the province," and an assembly it is sponsoring for April 18, 19 and 20, at Esquimalt Recreation Centre.

Expected to attend are about 400 women from various places in the province.

Program of events for the three-day gathering is given as (a) a convention: (b) a march through downtown Victoria; (c) a women's forum with booths, exhibits, displays produced by women's groups; (d) various social events to celebrate with and to meet other women of the province.

It's the proposed march through downtown Victoria that has made me sit up and take notice.

It can, if handled properly and with dignity, enhance the image of women and their continuing fight for equal rights.

At the same time, if it is allowed to become merely a placard-carrying event, it can downgrade the work of many serious minded women who will, no doubt, be attending that mid-April assembly.

In New York, the march of 3,000 men and women, while a traffic-snarling event, was quiet and orderly.

The rally ended in Union Square where feminist Betty Frieden, New York Lieutanant-Governor Mary Anne Krupsak and Rep. Bella Abzug (D) also of New York, addressed the gathering.

There were demands, of course, but presented quietly and seriously. These included calls for equal employment opportunities, universal child care, ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment to the United States constitution and improved access to abortion and birth control information.

Much the same pattern could be used for the proposed march here. It could end at the steps of our Legislative Buildings. There could be declared feminist speakers (I can think of a dozen who would be perfect for such an occasion) and the march should include men who believe in equal rights, as well as women.

Any demands should be well thought out and certainly should include equal employment opportunities, national day care and, most important of all, the immediate introduction of Federal Human Rights legislation and the establishment of a federal Human Rights and Interests Commission.

It's up to the British Columbia Federation of Women to make the proposed march a truly worthwhile event.

There's a contest going on at present to find a name for that newsletter. Anyone can enter. If you win you get a year's free subscription.

Submit your entry — if you have one — to The Women's Centre, 552 Pandora Avenue.

ANECDOTE—It's rather interesting to note, in the February-March report sent out by the International Women's Year Secretariat, based in the Privy Council office at Ottawa, that despite the flak directed at it (through letters to editors from individuals and some women's lib groups) the federal government's advertising campaign dealing both with IWY and the status of women in Canada, is bringing in good results.

The Secretariat report says it is "almost awash with responses to the advertisements ... by Feb. 14 more than 52,000 coupon requests had been received.

Regular staff, rather overwhelmed by the bags and boxes of mail, is asking all those who have sent in coupon requests, to be patient. Extra staff has been hired and a production line set up to handle all responses.

GUM NOT DECADENT, KREMLIN NOW RULES

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union is going into the chewing gum manufacturing business with production of 28,000 tons a year as a start.

The newspaper Moskovskaya Pravda said medical benefits tipped the scale in the long debate whether gum should be made in the Soviet Union.

It said while still there is some disagreement among medical experts, specialists have decided finally chewing gum cleans and strengthens the teeth and helps blood circulation in the mouth.

The Soviet press has long criticized chewing gum as harmful to the teeth. Periodically, there have been campaigns against youngsters who besiege foreign tourists for the stuff, sometimes offering badges and pins in return.

WHEELS

By MICHAEL LAMM

Dear Mike:
I'm going to buy a new 4-wheel-drive Jeep and am wondering about tires. A salesman told me that steel-belted radials aren't strong enough in the sidewalls to handle rough off-road driving. Is that true? What about steel-belted bias-ply tires?

BOONER

Dear Booner:
It's true that radial tires have relatively easy-to-puncture sidewalls, so they're not good for driving over sharp, jagged rocks and roots. You'd do better getting conventional 4-ply or 6-ply nylon tires.

Dear Mike:

KNOCKER

Dear Knocker:
Despite your saying it's not a bad bearing, I suspect it is. A worn bearing needn't vibrate or leak. Replace it and see what happens.

Dear Mike:
My 1966 Rambler V-8 likes to eat up starters. It's gone through four already. My father-in-law, who's been a mechanic for 35 years, says he's never seen anything like it. It's not the flywheel, and we've made sure it's the right starter. Each new starter is good for about one start before the teeth are all chewed up. Hope you can help.

STYMIED

Dear Stymied:
Most unusual, and I'm just guessing. Possibly you've got the wrong ring gear on the flywheel —one with the wrong number of teeth. Possibly, too, the mount is misaligned. Or you might be buying the wrong starter despite what you say. Check with a factory-authorized AMC dealer for the proper parts numbers, not with a parts house.

Dear Mike:
About a week ago, I shut off my 1970 Pontiac, and it's never started since. It sounds like it's trying to catch, but it won't quite. I've tinkered with the timing by moving the distributor back and forth, but it's best where it's supposed to be. Plenty of gas to the carb. Why won't she catch? catch?

CRANKING

Dear Crank:
Most likely she's jumped time — that "almost catching" syndrome sounds typical. Let a mechanic check. And although retiming the camshaft isn't a tough job, it's not something the amateur mechanic ought to tackle.

Wife Bristling Over Mustache

DEAR ABBY: Four months ago, when we were on vacation, my husband neglected to shave for a few days, so our daughter said: "Oh, Daddy, you'd look neat in a mustache, please grow one!"

Well, George grew a mustache. I didn't like it one bit, and I told him so, but he hasn't said anything about shaving it off. I don't hassle him about it, but he knows how I feel.

Some of our friends like George's mustache, and some don't, but George seems to hear only the compliments he gets on it.

Personally, I think he should listen to me. As his wife, I surely want what is best for him and I woukin't steer him wrong.

Abby, why would a man insist on wearing a mustache (or a beard) when he knows his wife doesn't like it?

OEN WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Facial hair on men communicates a variety of messages. Among the most obvious are: "Like it or lump it, I'm old enough to shave and have the whiskers to prove it, and I'm doing my own thing."

It's a symbol of independence, and in some cases, it's a decoration one courageously confers upon himself.

DEAR ABBY: What one thing most inspires you to write?

NOSY

DEAR NOSY: The Bureau of Internal Revenue.

DEAR ABBY: I prepared a huge, lovely dinner party myself. When my guests departed, they all thanked me and raved about how wonderful everything was.

The next morning, each one telephoned to tell me again how much they enjoyed the dinner, repeating the compliments about the food, etc.

Abby, I had no help, and there was plenty of cleaning up to do after that party, and I was very much annoyed with those unnecessary calls. Each one talked for 15 minutes to half an hour, and when they all finished, my morning was gone.

After having already thanked me, I felt it was totally unnecessary for them to call the next morning and take my time as they did.

On top of it all, one of the guests took a tremendous amount of meat for her second helping, and then asked for a doggie bag.

What is your opinion of both cases?

DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: In addition to verbal thanks on departing, a written note to reiterate one's appreciation is far more appreciated, and less intrusive than a telephone call. And as for the doggie bag number—Wow, and bow wow! Shame on her.

DEAR ABBY: My wife recently lost her mother whom we loved dearly. My wife was an only child and "Moms" left us a substantial sum of money.

Although we are a young family with young children and have had a difficult time making ends meet, we cannot bring ourselves to spend any of our inheritance.

We don't dislike money, and could have enjoyed spending some of moms' money while she was still alive if she had just made an occasional small gift to us and said: "Here, I know you can use a few luxuries, so please take it, and spend it and enjoy it!"

Abby, what do you think of this? Are we normal to feel as we do? Sign us.

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: I think you're probably sufficiently "normal" to get over your present attitude, and adopt the "better-late-than-never" philosophy. (P.S. Write to me in a year from now, and if you still can't spend it, I can recommend some dandy charities.)

Maintenance Easy On 3-Speed Bike

CYCLING

By DOUG LANGFORD

Maintaining your 3-speed bike:

Our last column dealt with the single-speed coaster-brake bicycle. The obvious difference between this type and the three-speed is the choice of gears and the braking system.

The multiple speed machine is easier to ride than a conventional bike, especially uphill where less pedal effort is required when you move the shift lever into a lower gear.

A three-speed bike costs more than a coaster-brake and requires more attention but it won't be hard for you to make periodic adjustments which are, for the most part, very simple.

Follow the same steps to prepare your three-speed for spring riding as you would the conventional bike.

Turn the bicycle over and give the tires, rims and spokes a thorough inspection. Replace worn or damaged parts. Tighten loose bolts. Oiling is virtually the same as the conventional bicycle.

Ideally, brake shoes should be ⅛ inch away from and centred on either side of rim.

To adjust brakes front and rear: Loosen locknut. If the sleeve has already been turned up to its maximum, you will have to turn sleeve down (clockwise) three-quarters of the way. Loosen the anchor nut to allow the brake cable to pull through hole in anchor bolt. Hold brake pads against the rim with one hand and pull cable tight. Re-tighten anchor nut. Brake pads might drag against the rim now but by turning the sleeve down a couple of more turns your troubles should be over.

Even though brake cables are pre-lubricated they can become rusty and sticky. To free sticky cables, loosen anchor nuts, pull the cable through and remove sheathing surrounding cable. Using light grease or oil, rub it onto the cable, then replace sheathing and re-install.

Poorly aligned wheels will cause your brakes to drag. Spin the wheel to check rim for alignment. A wheel slightly out of alignment is not uncommon and does not adversely affect braking action. However, if the wheel has broken or is missing spokes, I would advise a trip to the bicycle shop for repairs.

Another good idea is to have a spare front and rear brake cable handy. Cables have a habit of parting under hard braking, usually at the brake lever.

A kickstand is almost a must for three-speed bicycles. Bent brake levers and dirt-filled axles are the usual result when such bikes are laid or dropped on the ground.

A few three-speed models have the shifter incorporated into the right handle grip but I think the most popular changer is the one clamped to the handlebar and worked up and down with a trigger. Most high-rise bikes have the shifter on the frame, between the saddle and handlebars.

Adjustment of the shifter is very simple. Place shift lever in No. 3 position. Loosen locknut. Tighten barrel sleeve adjuster to eliminate cable slackness. Move shifter lever to No. 2 position. Look through hole in right axle nut. Indicator rod should be even with end of axle. If it is not, move barrel sleeve until this position has been reached. Then tighten locknut and test gears. It wouldn't hurt to put a couple of drops of oil on the chain-end of the indicator rod.

If the indicator rod is broken, turn the remains out with your finger and replace. Sometimes you will have to remove the axle nut to get at the rod. When replacing, finger tighten only.

One way to ensure that your shifting mechanism remains in adjustment is to leave the shifter in the No. 3 position when the bike is not in use.

If you run into trouble with your hub and can't solve it with routine adjustment or cable replacement, I would recommend you remove the wheel and take it to a repair shop. Most hubs are too complicated for the average householder to tackle. There are some readers who, armed with a book from the library or a manual and a few elementary tools, are going to plunge fearlessly forward. Full marks for you if you succeed in successfully removing, diagnosing, and remedying the problem. But . . .

Can you imagine the look on the repairman's face if you walk into his shop with a handful of parts and ask him to put it together. As much as I believe in doing it yourself where possible, some bicycle jobs are not worth the frustration.

Oiling your hub every month or so sparingly, since oil attracts dirt, can save you costly repair bills later.

NEXT: The 10-speed bike.

FEAR A WAY OF LIFE FOR ADOPTED VIETNAMESE

DENVER (UPI) — "At night they are very afraid," said Sally Bergner, mother of an adopted Vietnamese boy found in his first year of life dumped in a Da Nang garbage can.

The boy now is three and his American mother is a coordinator of Friends for Children of Vietnam, the group that arranged the mercy mission to bring to the United States the first 52 orphans.

The kids — ranging from three months to eight years — grew up homeless on the streets of Vietnamese cities. Hunger was normal and a new shirt was a treasure.

"A plate of food is placed before them and they go and hide it because they think there will be no more," Mrs. Bergner said. "They hide a piece of clothing like a gold bar."

She said a North Vietnamese takeover in Vietnam will end her agency's eight-year-old rescue efforts.

"I'm sure they (North Vietnamese) would stop our support of the children," Mrs. Bergner said. "What they would do after that, I don't know.

"The situatios is desperate. We don't know how long we'll continue to get co-operation from the South Vietnamese government."

The agency has been finding adopted homes for Vietnam orphans since 1967 when it was founded by a group of doctors who volunteered on medical missions to Southeast Asia. It later was taken over "By housewives who wanted to adopt Vietnamese children," Mrs. Bergner said.

The organization, with 300 chapters in the United States, operates 15 orphanages throughout South Vietnam for children. The main Saigon orphanage is a home to 100 children. Another 150 children are in foster homes in the Saigon area.

In late March, the agency began accelerating flights of the children to new homes in the United States because of the Communist offensive which already has swallowed up its orphanages in the north, including two in Da Nang.

Mrs. Bergner said the agency charged a fee to adoptive parents based on their income. She said 90 per cent of the money went back to the orphanages, run by Catholic nuns, in the form of food, medicine and clothing for the children.

"Our staff in Saigon very often goes up the river and looks for infant children," Mrs. Bergner said. "They bring back 1020 babies which, in turn, are put out to foster homes in Saigon. The mortality rate is very high."

She said Le Thi Thang, a 5-month-old girl she is attempting to adopt, wasn't aboard the first rescue flight. She said she knew only that the infant girl was somewhere in Saigon, "but I don't know where. I really don't know where she is."

Wheat Germ, Yeast Boost Macaroni Value

By HILDA BEASTALL

Most macaroni is made of refined wheat flour, needing to be bolstered as we bolster refined white flour if we wish to use it as a protein food. This is easily done by adding wheat germ and brewer's yeast, both of which improve flavor and food value of ordinary macaroni with little additional expense.

When we couple macaroni with cheese, eggs and milk we have a complete protein; that is why it makes a satisfying dish. Since it is also capable of many variations simply by putting in two different kinds of colorful vegetables each time we serve it, there is no reason for healthy persons to avoid macaroni dishes. You just remember not to eat a whole lot of bread and potatoes at the same meal, for your starch requirements have already been taken care of with the macaroni.

Here is a tasty, goodlooking dish, fairly quickly put together. Choose any small cut macaroni, or a fancy shell or spiral shape if you wish to add more interest in appearance.

MACARONI SPRING SUPPER

2 cups dry macaroni
Boiling salted water
2 tbsp soy oil or soft margarine
½ cup chopped celery with leaves
½ cup diced fresh mushrooms OR diced eggplant
1 cup chopped kale tips OR fresh spinach
1 tsp chopped fresh mint
¼ tsp salt
2 tbsp wheat germ
2 tsp brewer's yeast
¼ cup grated Cheddar cheese
¼ cup non-instant skim milk powder
6 small whole beets or equivalent.

Meanwhile, heat 2 tablespoons oil in another saucepan, add vegetables in succession, cook for 5 minutes before adding next prepared vegetable. Finally add mint and a few grains of salt.

By this time, macaroni will be cooked. Drain, add wheat germ and brewers yeast, then add vegetables. Shake all together.

Mix grated cheese with non-instant milk powder beaten with about a quarter cup of warm water until smooth. Pour over macaroni mixture, but don't mix. Replace saucepan lid for five minutes over lowest heat.

Serve on warmed plates; decorate with small whole or sliced beets. Serves three or four.

Next is a moulded macaroni dish with a green sauce and one colorful vegetable. This recipe also will serve three generously or make four smaller portions. It can be served either hot or cold.

MOULDED MACARONI WITH GREEN SAUCE

2 cups dry macaroni
Boiling salted water
2 small eggs
½ cup powdered skim milk
2 tbsp wheat germ
2 tsp brewer's yeast
1 tsp chopped mint leaves
½ cup grated Cheddar cheese.

Cook macaroni in boiling water until tender. Drain. Add milk and eggs; beat a little with large fork. Add all other ingredients and pour into an oiled mould, ring mould or tube pan. If you don't have any of these, an ordinary three-pint casserole will do. Oil it well so that the moulded macaroni turns out easily.

Set the mould into a shallow pan of hot water and bake in oven at 177 deg. C., (350 degrees F) for about 35 minutes. Unmould to a heated meat platter. Keep hot while making sauce.

Green Sauce:

¼ cup soft margarine
2 tbsp unbleached flour
1 cup milk from powdered skim
2 tbsp fine chopped parsley
2 tbsp fine chopped spinach
1 tbsp fine chopped celery leaf
Few grains salt and paprika.

In small saucepan, melt margarine, blend in flour. Add milk stirring and cooking until smooth and thickening. Add very finely chopped green leaves and salt. Stir and cook for three minutes or until well blended and colored. Pour over macaroni mould. Sprinkle a little paprika here and there on macaroni.

Serve either filled or surrounded by cooked, sliced young carrots.

If desired, any type of cooked meat can be diced for adding to the green sauce before heating. This will make a much larger meal and provide more servings.

You will notice onion has been left out of these recipes. The ones I have come across this week are beginning to sprout small roots and getting very strong flavored. The new green things of spring must take their place — parsley, chervil, mint, chickweed, spinach or even the kale tips. Mix them and chop fine. They are all good.

Together they make unusual flavoring. You vary the end flavor by different combinations of what you may have in the garden or the refrigerator.

In place of ordinary macaroni, you may want to use whole wheat macaroni or soy macaroni. Both are excellent sources of proteins, and because of their greater density, you need less to satisfy the appetite; therefore you cut calories.

However, the addition of wheat germ and brewers yeast as suggested also reduces the need for the normal huge serving of macaroni dishes. The added protein is satisfying.

Puffers Puff On Despite Warning

NEW YORK (UPI, — The warning signs that smoking endangers health are all around. But the puffers puff on.

New signals go up especially concerning women and teen-agers. Medical sources say that women more than ever before are dying suddenly from heart attacks, contracting lung cancer, and developing respiratory disease.

Authorities tie the increases directly to the fact that more women are smoking.

Among the teens, about one million start smoking each year and the rate among teenage girls is faster than that of teen boys, says the American Lung Association.

Even pre-teens are taking to the habit and the association's Oklahoma branch has an educational program aimed at preventing the early aged habitue.

Helen Jones, association spokesman, says that the increase among women is in part due to the new "climate of acceptability. It's changed dramatically. Until recently, this group had to resist cultural pressures."

"The rates among women of heart disease, emphysmea, lung cancer, brinchitis and hypertension all are increasing," she said. "One of the worst things is that it may take years for the thing to become the disease."

SISTER DEFENDS ROLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Although nuns have moved into the front lines of Christian ministry in the world, the impression persists that they're still mere institutional functionaries, says Sister Elizabeth Thoman.

"The gap between what we are and what others think we are still is to be bridged," she said in an interview. "We're moving into a new definition of our life and it needs to be recognized by the public, by the faith community and by the hierarchy itself.

"Sisters have become serious ministers dealing with issues of social justice and with the gospel in terms of the world today."

Sister Elizabeth, the first American nun to found her own public relations agency, is chairman of a communications group set up by Roman Catholic nuns to make their new ways better known.

"We've been under a bushel basket," she said. "It's time to get our work out and put it on the lampstand so people will know what's going on."

MP Pay Hike Flak Near

OTTAWA (CP) — It's been a cold spring on Parliament Hill but MPs should walk into a blast of political heat when they return from an 11-day Easter recess today.

That quarrelsome bill to increase their salaries by 33 1-3 per cent is expected to be called for debate sometime this week, perhaps this afternoon. It is likely to revive the storm of controversy which blew across the country when it first was introduced just before Christmas.

MPs now earn a basic $18,000 a year, plus $8,000 a year in tax-free expense allowance, a total of $26,000. The bill calls for a $24,000 salary and an allowance of $10,600, for a total of $34,600. It also would peg these incomes to the industrial wage index.

The bill is a modified version of the one presented to the Commons in December. The original, prepared after talks between backbenchers in all parties, proposed boosting the salary and the allowance by 50 per cent.

That proposal caused an outcry that forced the government to reduce the planned increase by almost 17 per cent. However, the reduction did little to quell the opposition from all parts of the country.

The New Democrats and Social Credit are expected to fight the modified bill and they might be joined by some Progressive Conservatives.

Ed Broadbent, NDP parliamentary leader, has argued that the modified version actually will give MPs more money by 1978 than the original plan. That argument is based on the fact that the industrial wage index has been increasing by 10 per cent a year recently.

MPs received their last pay raise June 2, 1971, but it was retroactive to Oct. 8, 1970. The government argues that the next increase will not be before 1978 and that 33 1-3 per cent over eight years is not much.

The thinking here is that the bill will be sent to committee, where amendments are possible, after a dogfight in the Commons. Many MPs say privately that they need the extra money but are uncomfortable about voting it during a period when the government is preaching restraint.

However, there is some joy for members when they resume their seats. Long-sought procedural changes begin today and will continue on an experimental basis until the summer recess begins in late June.

The daily 40-minute question period will be extended officially to 45 minutes and will start promptly at 2:15 p.m. and end promptly at 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday, the days the Commons sits at 2 p.m. when the House sits at 2 p.m. when the House 11:15 a.m. and end at noon.

A Vision of Peace Despite Woes: Ford

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — President Ford, rejecting forecasts of "depression at home and disintengration abroad," said today he sees co-operative growth and development throughout the world.

"My vision is one of peace," Ford said in a speech prepared for the National Association of Broadcasters' meeting in Las Vegas.

While acknowledging "it is true that we have suffered setbacks at home and abroad," Ford said:

"America will not give in to self-doubt nor paralysis of will power. Americans will not dismantle the defence of the United States. And we certainly will not adopt such a naive vision of the world that we dismantle our essential intelligence-gathering agencies.

"I can assure you that other superpowers are increasing . . . their military and intelligence capacities."

Ford made no direct reference to current inquiries into activities of the Central Intelligence Agency and other intelligence units which he has been defending in recent speeches.

"There are some who see nothing but a grim future of depression at home and disintegration abroad," the president said. "I reject that scenario. My vision is one of growth and of development worldwide through increasing interdependence of nations of the world.

"My vision is one of peace. And my vision of Americans is of a people who will retain their self-respect and self-dependence so that this vision can emerge."

Ford said that so long as he is president, "Americans will neither resign from the world nor abandon hope of peaceful and constructive relationships with all people."

He referred directly to setbacks in South Vietnam only in discussing government efforts to fly orphans to the U.S. from that country.

Ford criticized Congress for giving him a tax-cut bill that went beyond his request and for threatening to increase the federal deficit to $100 billion through new spending programs.

"The Congress must learn to live within the nation's means" and should fix and observe a budget that would limit to $60 billion the deficit in the new fiscal year that begins July 1, he said.

He said overstimulation of the economy can't offset all governmental efforts to combat the current recession and renew runaway inflation.

Free Beef In Farmers' Protest

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Cow-Calf Producers Association, protesting the economic plight of the farmer, tried to give away 1,500 pounds of ground beef Saturday. But when the demonstration ended, tthe farmers had nearly 500 pounds left over.

The protest, held on the grounds of the legislature, drew slightly more than 500 people who received two pounds each. It was the second such protest by the farmers in recent weeks.

When the first demonstration was held March 20 at Winnipeg city hall, about 575 people showed up and about 75 were turned away empty-handed when supplies ran out. The farmers then pledged to return for a bigger giveaway.

A spokesman for the farmers, said he was disappointed with the turnout at the legislature.

Home Grant Level Up To $50,105

First-time purchasers of new houses costing up to $50,105 now are qualified for the $500 federal home purchase grants, the local Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation office has announced.

The grants had been available only for purchases of new accommodation up to $38,245 in the Victoria area.

The corporation earlier had increased the mortgage limit to $46,000.

The higher prices take into account the increased cost of homes and condominiums.

Outside the Greater Victoria area the price limit to qualify for the $500 grant has been increased to $42,105 from $31,580.

The grants are available only to those buying a home for the first time and the house or condominium must be newly-constructed.

TIME RUNS OUT FOR WATERGATE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The statute of limitations ran out today for further Watergate prosecution of donors of the $20 million that poured into Richard Nixon's re-election coffers before a new disclosure law became effective.

On April 7, 1972, a federal election campaign act took effect, requiring campaign donations to be made public. Watergate investigators learned that in the days prior to that date many corporations and individuals secretly contributed a third of the total $60 million that was raised for Nixon's re-election.

A common cause suit forced publication of the list of contributions. Watergate prosecutors eventually got guilty pleas from 17 corporations and 15 corporate officials, mostly in connection with these contributions. Corporate contributions long have been illegal.

In the 1974 campaign reform act which took effect Jan. 1, a little-noticed amendment shortened the statute of limitations from five years to three years for criminal prosecution of corporate contribution and reporting violations.

A task force headed by associate Watergate prosecutor Thomas McBride worked up until the very end, but no more indictments were forthcoming for pre-April 7, 1972, violations.

Chiang Burial Site Named

TAIPEI (AP) — President Chiang Kai-shek of Taiwan will be buried April 16 in the little mountain village of Tsihu, a favorite retreat of the 87-year-old generalissimo, official sources said today.

The officials said a Christian ceremony would precede the burial. But the state funeral will be postponed indefinitely in the hope that someday it can be held on mainland China that Chiang lost in 1949 to Mao Tse-tung's Communists.

Guns boomed every half hour today in tribute to the longtime leader, who died of a heart attack Saturday night.

Friends from Chiang's revolutionary past surrounded the body in the Veterans Hospital where he died. Thousands of others went to his suburban residence to pay their respects.

Mourning was ordered for Taiwan's 15 million people. Theaters, bars and other entertainment centres were ordered closed for a month. Television stations suspended color broadcasts.

Several governments sent messages of condolences. But most remained silent to preserve good relation with Peking which, like Chiang's Nationalists, claims that Taiwan is part of China.

Hsinhua, Peking's official news agency, called Chiang "the common enemy of the Chinese people" whose "hands were stained with the blood of the revolutionary people of China."

It said the "military and administrative personnel of the Chinag Kai-shek gang, with patriotism in mind, will have a clearer view of the situation and actively contribute to liberating Taiwan now that Chiang is dead."

Peking is believed to have suggested secretly that after Chiang's death, Taiwan could become an autonomous province of China with the Generalissimo's elder son, Premier Chiang Ching-kuo, as governor and only gradual changes in the way of life and the economy of the island to be made during his lifetime.

Vice-President Yen Chia-kan, 70, was sworn in as president Sunday. But the power remains with Premier Chiang, who has been running the country since July 1972.

In his will, published a few hours after his death, Chiang called on his followers to carry out his unfulfuilled dream of recapturing the mainland.

Survivor Probe Set Radiation Standards

WASHINGTON (WP) — The only atomic bombs ever used in war rained death and destruction on two Japanese cities almost 30 years ago. At least 100,000 people were killed in Hiroshima and Nagasaki, and hundreds of thousands more suffered injury.

Beyond that, however, scientists feared that the intense radiation that accompanied the bombing would spawn massive, long-term medical damage, including a deneration of deformed children and increased cases of cancer.

Since 1947, teams of Japanese and American scientists have watched survivors of Hiroshima and Nagasaki and their children in one of the largest medical studies ever conducted for signs of this long-term damage.

As expected, they found increased cancer rates in survivors — some of them just beginning to show. But genetic abnormalities that would lead to deformities never materialized in the first generation of children.

Now the Atomic Bomb Casualty Commission (ABCC) — financed 95 per cent by the U.S. government and five per cent by Japan — has gone out of business, replaced as of last Tuesday by a joint American-Japanese foundation based in Hiroshima.

The $81 million study on the effects of radiation was started in 1947 by President Trumand for both humanitarian and scientific purposes.

"It was a unique opportunity," said Seymour Jablow, the National Academy of Sciences liaison with the program. "It would have been shameful to have done this much damage and then walk away without trying to get some good out of it."

Aside from determining some long-term consequences of atomic attack, figures developed by the ABCC relating ill effects to distance from the blast have been used by countries around the world to set radiation standards.

From the residents of the two Japanese cities at the time of the bombing, the ABCC picked 110,000 for the study. Of that group, 20,000 volunteers were given complete checkups every two years.

The potential genetic damage from the atomic radiation was the first concern of the ABCC scientists. "People were very worried about what was going to happen to them and their children," Jablow said.

"There were wildly varied predictions in the first several years" as to the extent of the genetic damage, said Dr. James V. Neel, the first director of the ABCC and now a geneticist at the University of Michigan. Some scientists went so far as to talk about a generation of monsters and two-headed children.

Dahlias: Care Brings Pleasure

A root or two of a special color and form of dahlia is a useful addition to a garden planted mainly in shrubs. While the tuberous roots will need lifting each fall, storing, replanting and probably staking, the flowers fill in at the end of summer into early fall.

With the shrubs being the most permanent part of the design, the color of the two dahlias chosen must either blend or contrast well with the foliage or flowers of the permanent residents.

One great advantage is that since you will buy only one or two roots, there need be little regret if your initial choice is not perfect at flowering season. At one or another of the late summer dahlia shows you will likely find the exact flower you would like if this spring's choice is unsuccessful.

Tubers which have sprouts just beginning to show now, may be planted into the garden, as can those showing only lively buds without sprouts. If long shoots have developed you will need to hold the tubers until all chance of ground frost is over, for young dahlia growth is susceptible to even one degree of frost.

To hold back dahlia sprouting, put the tuber in a cool, light window, at about 2 to 5 degs. C. The light and coolness will retard growth, and sprouts grow very slowly.

Give each tuber three feet square of space at least. Dig the soil deeply then add composted material to enrich the top 12 inches and to hold summer moisture. Leave the soil loose to warm before planting.

When setting the tuber, firm the soil, then have the growing tip about two inches below the finished surface. Before covering, place a stout stake to one side of the tuber, thrusting it down well. Then fill in and firm the soil gently around the tuber.

For garden display such as this suggested idea, the top of the growing plant can be pinched off after three pairs of leaves have developed. This will encourage a bushy plant having side branches. Of these you may later remove one or two of the weaker if too many seem to be coming.

Tie one or two branches loosely to the stake when about two feet tall. Use soft nylon, it is strong and will not cut if knotted at the stake.

A feeding of 6-8-6 at this point will be needed to help maintain the massive growth. One tablespoon to each dahlia worked into the top inch of thoroughly wet soil, then watered next day to carry to root level, will show results later in the season.

Dahlias need, in common with most of our garden plants, a thorough watering at root level at perhaps 10 day intervals after growth begins. They need a mainly sunny site though some mauve and pale pink varieties are most exquisite when receiving morning sun and dappled afternoon shade during flowering.

Disbudding for larger blooms is done every day or two before flowering commences but the purpose of these two dahlia plants is to have both quality and quantity of color in a late summer shrub garden.

QUALITY, PRIVACY, ECONOMY, APPEAL

If these criteria are important to you then you better view this lovely home before it sells — and it's going to sell quickly. 2 bedrooms on the main and one nicely finished in the full high basement. Large living room with lots of windows and a nicely located fireplace. When I say windows, you should see the dining room and kitchen. You'll be hard pressed to find brighter friendlier rooms. This should appeal to the economy minded — storm windows all around. Saving more than pennies in these days of high oil prices. The basement area is high, dry and bright — a delightful area for canning or a work shop. Exceptionally large backyard providing room for a vegetable garden or just lots of open space. Nestled in a quiet little street only one block long it's hard to find a more secluded spot. It was built in 1947, looks like it was built today, and it's bound to sell tomorrow.

By FRED KARPIN

If there is any one prime quest in bidding, it is to find the suit. And if the suit is divided 4-4 (rather than 5-3 or 6-2), it is usually even better in terms of trick-taking potential.

As a matter of fact, from the expert point of view, when a partner knows that his partnership possesses one suit divided 5-4, and another suit divided 4-4, he will usually tend to select the eight-card suit as the trump suit, rather than the nine-card suit. This theme is illustrated in today's deal.

North-South vulnerable. North deals.

| North | East | South | West |

| 4 ♣ | Pass | 4 NT | Pass |
| 5 ♦ | Pass | 6 ♠ | Pass |

Opening lead: King of ♥.

When North raised South in clubs, South knew that North possessed five spades, for with four clubs and four spades North would have opened the bidding with one club. And North figured to have a very strong hand, since he had jumped to four clubs; and, in so doing, had voluntarily by-passed a (theoretical) three notrump contract. The latter is very rarely done, since nobody drives towards a minor-suit game contract unless he has no alternative. So South contracted for the small slam in clubs.

After dummy's ace of hearts had captured the opening lead, South gathered in the outstanding trumps in three rounds. Next came five spades, South discarding his losing heart on the fifth spade. He then ruffed dummy's remaining heart. At the end, he conceded a diamond. And so he made 12 tricks: five spades, the ace of hearts, the ace of diamonds, and five trump tricks (three outright, one by ruffing a heart, and the board's remaining trump).

The reader will note that at a spade contract (a nine-card trump suit), declarer could have made only 11 tricks.

The reason why a 4-4 trump suit will usually produce a trick more than a 5-4 trump suit is this: in the 4-4 triump suit, three rounds of trumps will usually gather in the outstanding pieces. The two remaining trumps — one in each hand — can now win two tricks separately, for a total of five trump winners. If the 4-4 suit were not the trump suit (i.e., if it were the side suit), all declarer could win in this suit would be four tricks. Hence he tends to gain a trick by making it the trump suit.

Inflation: Step by Step

By WILLIAM REES-MOGG
The Times of London
(Third of Ten)

$ THE REIGNING ERROR £

JEFFREYS: Agreed.

PRISONER: It is the November, 1973, issue of The Btnk Credit Analyst, a journal published in Montreal; it is a banking journal of a scholarly character. In an article discussing the great German inflation, it points out that one of the great lessons from the German and other inflations is that once you have pushed enough money and credit into the system, rising prices can be financed by a rise in velocity even though monetary expansion is stablized. Eventually, this creates a great squeeze and forces the Government into great expansionist efforts in order to ease money, and preempt bankruptcies.

JEFFREYS: Then the sequence is this. First you have a war, or some precedent event. Then you push up the money supply. The prices rise. Then you try to counteract the price increases by stabilizing the money supply. Then you are faced with a continuation of rising velocity which finances still higher prices, but threatens bankruptcies. You are forced to put more money in. So inflation goes on, and accelerates.

PRISONER: M'lud, that is my understanding of the process exactly. The pressure on secondary banks in Britain, the collapse of the Herstatt Bank in Germany, the distress of the U.S. banking system, including the Franklin rescue, are an example of how this stage of an inflation puts pressure on the authorities to increase the money supply, when on other grounds they would wish not to do so. It is in short much easier to avoid starting an inflation than to stop one in full career.

JEFFREYS: Did the authorities in Germany at that time see their situation in the way you are presenting it?

PRISONER: No, they did not. They were still preoccupied with their original political problem, the problem that preceded the fatal money supply decisions. When one reads the contemporary accounts, it is the questions of reparations, of the disagreement between Britain and France on reparations payments, of the French occupation of the Ruhr in early 1923, which stood out in people's minds. The reparations payments did of course damage Germany's currency in foreign exchange markets, and the occupation of the Ruhr crippled German industry. It is not at all surprising that these events caused economic collapse. It was, however, the monetary policy which ensured that the collapse should take the form of an inflation that wiped out the value of money.

JEFFREYS: I have heard that the inflation so affected the exchange rate that you could obtain a good room and dinner in a luxury hotel for less than a dollar, or a few shillings.

PRISONER: M'lud, you could. There is no doubt that the floating exchange rate, which because of the reparations Germany did not have the gold reserves to stabilize, tended to accentuate the inflation. Indeed, given fixed rates and the borrowing power to support them, it is doubtful whether such an extreme inflation could have happened.

JEFFREYS: You said that the impact of the increase in the money supply was modified by three factors. Those were the time lag, velocity and the exchange rate?

PRISONER: Yes, m'lud.

JEFFREYS: In fact all three eventually increased the inflationary effect of the increase in the money supply, did they not?

PRISONER: In fact they did, even to the point of overcoming attempts at stabilization.

JEFFREYS: And all these depended on expectation? The time lag and the changes of velocity, as you have argued; the floating exchange rate reflected both German and foreign expectations about the future of the mark.

PRISONER: Yes, m'lud, that is true.

JEFFREYS: So we may draw two conclusions. Increasing the money supply is a most dangerous course, because of the inflation that can follow. If we face an actual inflation, we must stabilize the money supply, and must create a powerful expectation that it will remain stabilized.

PRISONER: That, m'lud, is when the next difficulty comes.

JEFFREYS: Prisoner, you are beginning to convict yourself of being an economist: whenever we see land, you push the boat back out to sea whenever we see a clarity, you see a difficulty.

PRISONER: The difficulty, m'lud, is this. Just as in every inflation there is an increase in the money supply to begin it, so in all but the gold inflations there is later a loud complaint that there is not enough money. When inflation is in full swing, governments do not find that their citizens complain that they have too much money, but that they have too little, that trade is strangled because money is so short.

JEFFREYS: What is the reason for this? We have seen that the creation of money is a great evil, at least when created to excess, but how can it be that the act of increasing the money supply produces the complaint that the supply is too small. I do not like your paradoxes.

PRISONER: It is nonetheless so. It was so in the German inflation. It is so in our present inflation; it is true now in Britain, when the Chancellor of the Exchequer is under great pressure to increase the money supply. It is true in the United States, where Dr. Arthur Burns is trying to resist the same pressure. It was true of France in the assignat inflation; it is a necessary part of the pattern.

JEFFREYS: How so? Explain yourself.

PRISONER: The process is perhaps easiest to see in the paper money inflations, though it is clear enough in all of them. When an inflation begins, the first increase of money normally tends to stimulate trade; prices rise less rapidly than the money supply and trade moves up to the full employment level. We saw that Germany had this stage; France did, too, in the early 1790s; the world inflation in recent years had the same effect. In the second stage a momentum of prices has been created; each increase in the money supply tends to be matched by price increases equal or more than proportionate to itself; at the same time there is a resistance to further increases in the money supply by men who see what harm it is doing. M'lud, I would like now to introduce a new authority and two new concepts.

JEFFREYS: I like a good authority. I nod to a concept when I see him, but I do not choose to make a new acquaintance of one every day.

PRISONER: My authority is a Nineteenth-Century American historian, Professor Andrew Dickson Whiate, the first President of Cornell University. His lectures on the French "Fiat Money Inflation" proposed a law which is called "The law of accelerating issue and depreciation." "It was comparatively easy to refrain from the first issue; it was exceedingly difficult to refrain from the second; to refrain from the third and those following was practically impossible." He compares the demand for ever-larger quantities of money to the drunkard who feels the need for ever-increasing quantities of drink; in the age of drugs we might point to the same phenomenon with heroin addiction; the dose has to be increased, often to achieve a lessening effect.

JEFFREYS. And your other concept? I long to shake him by his gallows hand.

PRISONER: The supply of money expressed in terms of constant prices. We have seen that in inflations the velocity of circulation rises, and that simultaneously the real supply of money is falling. And indeed one sees that in each of these inflations prices do beat the money supply, that the ratio between money supply, that the ratio between moeny and transacted business turns against money. The nominal supply of money increases vastly but the real supply of money falls.

JEFFREYS: If this be so, what consequences do you derive from it?

PRISONER: That changes in the nimonal supply of money determine prices; changes in the real supply of money determine economic activity. The fall in the real supply of money causes numerous economic evils. There is bound to be a shortage of liquidity in the banking system, because money is being asked to finance a disproportionate quantity of transactions. Businessmen are affected by the shortage of liquidity and respond by reducing activity. Investment and investment values fall in real terms, though in the later stages of inflation capital values usually rise in nominal terms. Unemployment rises. There is also a crisis of government finance. It has been correctly written of Germany: "The Minister of Finance and the Governor of the Central Bank claimed in 1923 that in gold or deflated prices, money had hardly increased at all and in fact was lower that in 1913. For, typical of the later stages of hyperinflation is the inability of the Central Bank to expand real money. New issues of nominal or paper money are rejected faster than they can be printed."

3 Charged in Trafficking Freed on Crown Failure

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three Hong Kong nationals, charged in connection with the seizure of heroin worth $3 million, were ordered released Friday pending trial because of a procedural failure by the crown.

Mr. Justice H. E. Hutcheon ordered their release from the lower mainland regional correctional centre after their lawyer, H. A. D. Oliver, argued in B.C. supreme court chambers that the federal justice department had failed to ensure their continued detention.

Ordered released were Yuk Chung Ho, 30, Yiu Tong Lai, 21, and Chung Man Ma, 34. Each are charged with possessing heroin for the purpose of trafficking and with conspiracy to traffic in the drug.

Mr. Justice Hutcheon refused to order the release of Fook Lay Tang, 47, of Vancouver, who faces trial by direct indictment Monday on a charge of possessing heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

Oliver said the detentions were no longer legal because the crown had failed to comply with a criminal code provision that requires such detentions to be reviewed after 90 days.

UBC, CUPE Settle

VANCOUVER (CP) — Final exams now are expected to go ahead as scheduled at the University of British Columbia.

The UBC negotiating committee Sunday signed an agreement worked out Saturday with Local 116 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing workers employed in the trades and food services at UBC.

The agreement still needs ratification by the union membership and the UBC board of governors, but this is considered almost a certainty.

No details were released on the settlement proposal but the union was seeking a $250 monthly across-the-board increase. Experienced maintenance workers made $770 a month under the old contract and a food services worker earned $524. Negotiations had been going on since last November.

Mekong Battle Begins: Shells Reach Saigon

Peace Talk Bid

Times News Services

Phnom Penh, Thailand's foreign minister Chartchai Choonhaven said today in Bangkok that his government had contacted the rebels about starting peace talks with the Cambodian government in Bangkok.

"It is a direct contact," Chartchai told reporters after hosting a luncheon for Cambodian Prime Minister Long Boret prior to the latter's return to Phnom Penh.

"We made that proposal to the Khmer Rouge on a humanitarian basis," Chartchai said. "As a neighboring country of Cambodia, we don't want to see the continuing bloodshed.

"The Cambodian government accepted our offer to have Bangkok as a place for negotioations. It is now up to the Khmer Rouge to decide whether they want peace negotiations or not. If they turn down our proposal. They must be responsible for what will happen in the future to their country and people."

Insurgents also moved into Kompong Speu, 30 miles southwest of the capital, aftrer a shelling attack that wounded 30 persons.

Field reports said rebels on the east bank of the Tonle Sap River north of Phnom Penh were harassing the road along the west bank between Phnom Penh and Prek Phnou with mortar and machine-gun fire.

Eighteen rounds in three hours killed two persons and wounded one, but the U.S. airlift of rice, fuel and ammunition went on. Informed sources said the daily tonnage of ammunition has dropped in recent days as appropriate supplies dwindled.

Times News Services

Communist gunners less than eight miles from the centre of Saigon fired into the city's suburbs today in the first major attack on the capital since the current offensive began.

The shelling came one day after governmentt troops made their first significant counter-attack against the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong offensive, re-occupying the abandoned city of Nha Trang, 188 miles northeast of Seaogon.

Communist forces also shelled at least 10 district capitals in the rice-rich Mekong Delta today.

Most of the shelling in the delta, where one-third of South Vietnam's 20 million people live, was in Dinh Tuong province about 35 miles south of Saigon.

The rice-rich and usually peaceful Delta now appears to be shaping up as the next major target of the North Vietnamese forces.

U.S. military analysts says the probing attacks now beginning in the region are virtually certain to increase in intensity as part of a plan to both cut off the delta from the capital and tie up South Vietnamese forces there so they cannot reinforce Saigon.

In the short term, cutting off the delta would leave Saigon feeling isolated. In the longer term, it would create food shortages in the capital.

Meanwhile, the Pentagon denied that evacuation of United States citizens from Saigon was imminent despite a growing U.S. naval armada off South Vietnam.

The U.S. embassy in Saigon and independent sources reported at least one aircraft carrier, three destroyers, six amphibious ships and part of a marine division were standing by.

Three other aircraft carriers, including the nuclear-powered Enterprise, are within a short distance of the coast, reports said.

Informed sources said the marines were prepared to land in Saigon to evacuate Americans and some Vietnamese if major fighting or chaos broke out.

There are nearly 6,000 Americans still in South Vietnam, although many have begun leaving.

Britain today evacuated most of its 29-man embassy staff and all its dependents and their baggage aboard a chartered Cathay Pacific Airways 707 jet to Hong Kong, diplomatic sources said.

The actual diplomatic staff at the embassy will be 10 or fewer by the end of this week, the sources said.

Saigon's defences though may be bolstered somewhat by some of the several thousand troops that escaped from the abandoned northern sectors.

Though these soldiers arrived largely unarmed and in tatters, Pentagon officials believe that up to six battalions, or close to half of a 10,000-man division, can probably be reconstituted from

★ MORE BABIES ON WAY

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Sixty-one Cambodian and Vietnamese orphans arrived here Sunday from war-torn South Vietnam.

In Saigon, the government said today that "operation babylift" will go on and Vietnamese orphans will be allowed to fly out of the country to new homes in the U.S., Canada and other countries.

Deputy Prime Minister Phan Quang Dan announced resumption of the evacuation of orphans only hours after it was halted.

He said the government would make sure all orphans leaving the beleaguered nation would be adopted.

Resumption of the emergency babylift program came after pressure from officials of the U.S., Canada and Australia — the three countries directly involved in the evacuation — was put on the Saigon government, U.S. embassy sources here said.

Ten of the children who arrived on the flight to Canada Sunday were survivors from a U.S. military transport that crashed near Saigon Friday. Most of the orphans will be with their new families today.

Senator Ray Perrault, who represented the department of immigration at Vancouver International Airport, said before the Canberra announcement that Ottawa is re-assessing its position and will make a statement, probably early in the week.

He said Canadian officials in Saigon were evaluating the cases of orphans there and would be referring some for adoption in Canada in cases where there was a "valid need for adoption."

He said the terms of a valid need are best determined by Canadian officials in Saigon.

Wait, Worry Worth It As Thien Comes Home

Two-year-old Thien Erich Mueller was in a jolly frame of mind this morning, after his 6,500-mile plane journey from South Vietnam.

Thien is one of 61 orphan children two arrived at Vancouver International Airport Sunday, en route to new homes in North America.

Seven went to B.C. families, two of them in Victoria.

Thien was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Erich Mueller while a nine-month-old boy Jamie was adopted by Norman and Betty Henson of 4203 Leeron Place.

The Hensons were told in August the adoption had been approved.

Since then the whole family, including the Hensons' four other children (two of them adopted) have been waiting eagerly for his arrival.

Mr. Henson and her husband, a building contractor, said they didn't want any further publicity because "it's a family thing."

Mrs. Mueller was also reluctant to talk about the adoption of Thien but said the publicity might encourage other families to adopt oyerseas children.

"It is because someone else gave an interview that we have Thien today," Mrs. Mueller said.

"We wanted to adopt a boy but there were none available here. Then the interview started us thinking about overseas children.

"I want to emphasize this was not a spur of the moment thing. We adopted Thien when he was in Vietname in September. We had all the background on him and we saw his picture.

"After that it was just a case of waiting and worrying. First he was coming, then he wasn't. I'm all wrung out."

They met Thien at the airport in Vancouver on Sunday. He was fully dressed except for shoes.

This morning, Thien had a new set of clothes — and a pair of shoes.

He says something that sounds like "maaaa!" and then points. When he is hungry he picks up a dish and hands it to whoever is near.

Except for a cold, he appears in good health. He is in excellent spirits and looks well fed.

This morning he alternated between playing with his toys and hugging his new family.

"He has only cried once, so far. When I tried to give him a bath. So I just gave him a light wash. I'm glad he cried. It showed he wasn't in a state of shock."

Israel Pressured By U.S.

TEL AVIV (UPI) — The United States is putting "low-keyed" pressure on Israel to make further concessions toward reaching a second-stage accord in the Sinai desert with Egypt, Israeli government officials said today.

"Low-keyed but definite slight pressure is being put on Israel by the United States which is putting Israel in an uncomfortable position," one official said.

Another official said that continued pressure by the United States on Israel "makes it more difficult for the Israeli government to rely on a continued U.S. friendship as a substitute for real and conventional strategic barriers."

Third Unit Of CUPE Seeks Pact

A third unit of Canadian Union of Public Employees is reported to be exploring separate settlement terms with management in the area's civic strike-lockout now in its 11th week.

The 91-member Capital Regional District employee group has informed the CUPE area bargaining committee of its intention to follow city inside workers in their attempt today to reach a satisfactory understanding with employers.

Both moves come quickly on the heels of a conditional settlement reached secretly by School District 61 and janitors and maintenance men belonging to CUPE 382, who agreed late Friday to accept the terms eventually negotiated by the area bargaining committee and regional employers.

The CUPE area bargaining group was meeting late this morning to discuss the latest developments in the civic and school employee confrontation with trustees, aldermen and regional directors in four core municipalities, SD 61 and Sidney.

Part of the matter to be determined in the initial talks between the local and the city and regional district is whether employers will lift their lockout of civic employees, a decision that will have to take into account the other municipal jurisdictions of the area.

There was a move at the weekend to lift the lockout as far as the juvenile detention home is concerned.

City outside workers Local 50 president Jim Walker, chairman of CUPE area bargaining, said he was personally willing to remove pickets from the institution in order to remove children from the undesireable alternative accommodation in RCMP cells.

Walker was still smarting today over secret talks between the school board and janitor's Local 382 to end the six-weeks-old maintenance strike at some 50 area schools.

Walker said the janitor local was entitled to bargain separately, just as inside workers at city hall may negotiate with Victoria as a single unit. the difference is that Local 382 failed to grant the area bargaining group its confidence.

"We're all autonomous," Walker said. "Any of the employers can do the same thing. But when you don't know what is going on it takes you by surprise."

Referring to the janitor's executive, he added:

"They haven't done themselves too much justice in relation to the other mem-

ULSTER SUFFERS WORST WEEKEND

BELFAST (UPI) — A 30-year-old Roman Catholic on his way to work at a linen factory was shot to death today in Ulster's worst weekend of violence in two years that threatened the Irish Republican Army ceasefire.

Police said the shooting of the worker at Mossley, about 10 miles from Belfast, brought to 11 the number of persons killed in less than 48 hours in Northern Ireland. At least 80 persons were injured in the weekend upsurge of pub bombings and shootings.

Police said two gunmen jumped from a car and shot the worker point-blank while his two companions fled to safety inside the factory gate.

The shooting, believed by police to be a straightforward sectarian assassination, occurred as Britain's Minister for Northern Ireland met with top security advisers to consider emergency measures to meet the rise in violence.

MLAs Back on Job After Easter Break

The politicians will resume debate of the government's spending estimates for the next year and will pick up with the agriculture department where they left off on March 26.

So far they have used up about 30 hours of the 135 hours set aside for estimates debate under new house time limits and only the premier's office and finance department have had spending estimates approved.

Another 19 departments remain to be debated.

Only a handful of bills have been introduced by the government since the spring session began Feb. 18, despite Premier Barrett's promise that 70 to 90 pieces of legislation would be brought down.

Debate of estimates is expected to take the house into mid-May and, depending on the number of bills finally brought down, the session will likely continue into June.

Hughes Sought Longer War: Aides

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Billionaire Howard Hughes sought to continue the war in Vietnam until he could recover losses in his helicopter program, the Las Vegas Sun reported today.

The Sun said it confirmed the report with two former Hughes aides — one-time Nevada operations manager Robert Maheu and former "scientific advisor" John Meier.

"I would never have disclosed this voluntarily, but in late 1968 or early 1969 Hughes wrote a memorandum urging that we exert our influence to continue the Vietnam war in order to recoup Hughes' losses on the L.O. (light observationary) helicopter program," Maheu was quoted as saying by the Sun.

"I found the memorandum incredible and offensive and I did nothing about it," said Maheu.

Meier, who lives in a suburb of Vancouver, confirmed he had seen one memornadum dealing with the helicopter program and the Vietnam war. He said that the memo was sent to Maheu by Hughes suggesting that Maheu "should get to our friends in Washington and see what could be done about keeping the war in Vietnam going" to benefit the Hughes helicopter program.

Maheu, when contacted by United Press, said when he refused to co-operate with Hughes' wishes regarding the attempt to perpetuate the war, that he believed it contributed to his losing his job with Hughes in late 1970.

"I wouldn't buy it (the Hughes directive) and in early 1970 Hughes reminded me of my lack of co-operatin. I think this had something to do with my dismissal later that year," said Maheu.

Meier is being sued by the Hughes operation on charges he defrauded the billionaire in the acquisition of thousands of mining claims in Nevada in the late 1960s. Meier is also under federal indictment on charges of tax violations. He forfeited a $100,000 cash bond several months ago when he failed to appear in a Nevada court on the tax charge.

Maheu also has had legal encounters with the Hughes organization since he was fired in December, 1970, as head of Hughes' Nevada operations. Maheu won a $2.8 million libel suit in Los Angeles federal court last July against Hughes.

Choppers Swarm City Skies

Belonging to the 540th Aviation Company of the Washington Army National Guard in Tacoma, the "choppers" were returning from a two-day international exercise, Rambling Rose, in which Victoria and Vancouver Militia units took part.

Also participating were members of the B.C. Regiment (Duke of Connaught's Own), Royal Canadian Armored Corps, of Vancouver.

Third in a series, the exercise was the largest of its kind on Vancouver Island.

That Kindly Last Word: An Obit Writer's Memory

No assessment of the magnificent hypocrisy of the newspaper obituary should even begin without the reminder that we've come a long way, baby.

There was a time when, apart from the classified death notice, newspapers ran column upon column of editorial obituaries. Any impressionable reader might mourn daily the passing of so many splendid men and even, occasionally, women. Then, as now, we simply never recorded the demise of a single creep, jerk or fink. Everybody who died, as far as the newspapers were concerned, was fitted with a halo.

We're much more selective, now. The editorial obituary is reserved for those who, for one reason or another, have been in the public eye. The hypocrisy is thus limited, though hardly eliminated.

I noticed the other day in one of the Vancouver papers, for example, a final eulogy to a certain tycoon whose career I've followed for 30-odd years. He made his millions as a slum landlord, in just barely legal financial manipulations, in some of the most ruthless, cold-blooded, heartless rip-offs ever perpetrated in the western world. Yet here he was, enshrined in type, the "prominent business-man," a great loss to the community, etc., etc.

If I smiled fondly at this old-fashioned exercise in semantics rather than reacting with the fury that it invited, it can be explained only by the fact that my baptismal year in the newspaper business was spent almost entirely as an obit writer. Every newsroom had one in those days. It was the accepted way for a young reporter to get his spurs. You were given a list of undertakers. You phoned them each day for their contributions. "Hi, Mr. Hanna. Jack Scott here. And who have we got today?"

The name of the game was to find something — anything — that would make the dear departed look saintly. You might know that the dear departed had been an unmitigated scoundrel, an exploiter of widows and orphans and all-round swindler, but your only concern was to confer that brief immortality of the obit.

"Prominent businessman" was, of course, often the euphemism for a lifetime of dirty dealing, but it had a nice ring to it and could be used at least once every day.

If you already had a "prominent businessman" you might find it useful to use the description "well-known sportsman," often meaning only that the dear departed had had a piece of the action in commercial sports or had been a long-time member of the city's most exclusive golf club, sometimes head of the committee given the job of keeping out the Jews.

Another handy device was to describe the charitable work of the subject. Surprisingly often, prominent businessmen were very active in charitable groups as the alternative to giving them money.

You were home free, of course, if you could find any connection with a recognized church, in which case the man became "prominent churchman" and this, as the undertakers particularly knew, was the complete answer to any sins the dear departed might have committed in any other way.

Curiously enough, I never became cynical about any of this. When I graduated to the sterner stuff of reporting I rather missed the obituaries. I could say truthfully that I had never failed to find good in a man, or, at least, to find something that looked good.

It wasn't until years later that I heard the story of a man who simply could not be made to look good and I've often wondered how I would have tackled the obituary.

My wife and I were in Hollywood where I was to do a series of interviews. We were guests on the set where Clark Gable was working on one of his last pictures. At the noon break we were invited to lunch with him in the MGM studio commissary (he picked away distastefully at a salad without dressing, fighting his weight problem) and found him to be a most engaging, articulate man.

Gable and the others at the table talked almost exclusively about a top executive of the studio who had died the previous week from a massive coronary. He had been, it seemed, one of the most hated men in the film industry, a man who had reached the pinnacle over the bodies of uncounted producers, directors and actors he had sacrificed for his own career.

Such was the man's reputation, Gable recalled, that when the studio's press department was asked to prepare an obituary for release to the papers they could not find a single person who would say a kind word. Gable, himself, had simply declined comment.

Finally someone in the press department remembered that, for at least a dozen years, the executive had visited the studio's barber shop where a man named Frank had given him a shave each morning. If nothing else there was a chance here for the folksy touch that might rescue them.

Several members of the press department hurried to the barber's chair. They told Frank of their mission. The barber then recounted, in great detail, his own detestation of the executive. He had never left a tip in all those years, not even a "thank you," had never, in fact, said a civil word.

"We know all that, Frank," the press department head said. "All we want is some small tribute from you."

As Gable told the story, the barber thought for a very long time and then his face took on a beatific smile. The press department men leaned forward expectantly, their pencils poised above their notebooks.

"I can say one thing for him," the barber said, at last. "He was not a hard man to shave."

TIGHT MONEY SITUATION BLAMED

Two Schools Shelved at UVic

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Times Staff

The proposed schools of nursing and social work at the University of Victoria, scheduled to open in September, have been shelved for at least a year.

The decision was made Saturday at a meeting of UVic president Dr. Howard Petch and faculty deans and was blamed on a shortage of money.

About 45 applications would have been accepted for the new programs, and more than 500 inquiries had already been made, a university spokesman said.

The tight-money situation exists despite a provincial grant increase of 30.8 per cent this year.

Static student fees, little money carry-over from last year, and salary conversion costs combined to bring the working capital increase down to 20 per cent, Petch said.

The new law school will take a portion of that 20 per cent and so will faculty and staff salary increases, and costs of more staff hired to handle this year's extra students.

An education faculty primary school internship program slated for September will also be postponed, Petch said.

There will likely be other cuts to be decided at departmental levels.

Directors for both new schools have already been hired, and they will come to UVic as planned for a year's preparation before classes begin.

The proposed nursing program was aimed at working nurses who have diplomas but wish academic upgrading for a B.Sc. degree.

Social work was to be a fifth year program for graduate students. A planned introductory course in social work for undergraduates will likely still be offered.

Schools Set Full Days

Most Greater Victoria schools will be back to a full school day on Tuesday, and most high schools by Wednesday, school board spokesman Bill Stavdal said today.

All classes in district schools ended at noon today, he said, so janitors and maintenance workers would have this afternoon to sweep the schools, clear up litter and restore floor surfaces.

All elementary schools with no serious cleanup problems, about two-thirds of them, will be open Tuesday for a full day. The others will begin the full day Wednesday.

High schools will continue on the three-hour day Tuesday and return to normal hours Wednesday, he said.

Stavdal said principals have been asked to assess the scholastic status of their students to see if there is need for remedial instruction, such as late afternoon, evening, weekend or summer tutoring.

Schools have been operating on a reduced school day since early March because of a strike of district custodians and maintenance workers, Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Local 382 decided Friday night to return to work today.

Pollen, Walker Agree on Ch. 10

Mayor Peter Pollen and Jim Walker, head of the Canadian Union of Public Employees bargaining committee, agree on one issue — that Channel 10 should not be allocated to commercial interests.

Charles Barber, chairman of Publicair, a group organizing a petition to be presented to the Canadian Radio-Television Commission when it meets April 22 in Vancouver, said today both Pollen and Walker have agreed to be Publicair sponsors.

"At least they have that in common," Barber said.

Volunteers are circulating a petition downtown and in shopping centres for the next two weeks, asking people to oppose allocation of the channel to a commercial company.

More than 1,000 have already signed the petition, which asks the CRTC to commit the channel to public and educational broadcasting.

Camosun To Ratify Agreement

Camosun College council is expected to ratify tonight its first collective agreement with Local 947 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

The proposed contract gives the 62 clerical workers a 96-cent-an-hour, across-the-board raise, an average salary hike of 22 per cent.

The contract, already ratified by CUPE, runs from January 1975 to March 31, 1976.

However, salary clauses of the contract are to be renegotiated this month for possible upward adjustments if other CUPE locals in the region win higher wage settlements.

Camosun has kept its negotiations with CUPE separate from those of the employers' regional bargaining group so it hasn't been involved in the current stikes and lockouts in the region.

Local 947 vice-president John Kendall said today he expects any new wage hikes negotiated will be minor.

The local represents more than 200 greater Victoria school board clerical staff as well as the Camosun workers, and before this the Camosun workers always negotiated jointly with the school board workers.

Gov't Union Completes First Talks

The B.C. government Employees' Union and the provincial government officially completed their first round of bargaining today with the signing of the last component wage contract.

The social and health services component of the union, representing 1,500 employees, this weekend voted 79 per cent in favor of ratifying their first individual contract.

Official signing of the contract was to take place in Victoria today.

The social services component is the last of 13 groups within the BCGEU to negotiate their first wage contract with the government.

Under the two-tiered system of bargaining established under 1973 legislation, the union first negotiated a master contract covering basic fringe benefits and working conditions for all 35,00 union members.

Since then each component group has bargained separately for individual wage agreements.

Details of all the component wage agreements have officially been kept secret by both the government and the union but now that the last contract has been signed, details are expected to be released shortly.

A study of orders-in-council approving new wage schedules for the first component settlements indicate the salary increases may run as high as 56 per cent for some junior employees.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall, who still refused to supply detailed salary figures despite release of those figures, said the percentage figures are "fatuous" because emphasis of the wage settlements has been to bring civil servants up to a level comparable with other sectors of the economy.

With the first round of bargaining completed, the government and the BCGEU are expected to begin the process again next month when they open talks for their second master agreement.

Fishboats Attract Hundreds

More than 50 trollers belonging to members of the Pacific Trollers Association jammed the Causeway jetties and the inner reaches of the harbor.

The fleet was blessed by Father Ray Cunningham and Rev. Trevor Williams. Mayor Peter Pollen then invited people to accept the salmon fishermen's invitation to go aboard.

People were shown the sophisticated electronic gear used to locate fish and other equipment used in the industry.

Providing music for the four-hour event was the band of the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps.

Esquimalt MP Donald Munro was among those attending.

The trolling season opens April 15.

Cruiser Damaged in Chase

About $1,000 damage was caused to a Victoria city police car Sunday night when it collided with a stolen car it was chasing.

Police spotted a car, reported stolen earlier Sunday evening, heading south on Douglas. Two marked police vehicles pursued the car which ran 13 red lights at an estimated speed of 60 miles per hour.

The car was overtaken by one police vehicle near Beacon Avenue. The driver of the stolen car slammed on his brakes. The other police vehicle tried to avoid collision but hit the stolen car from behind.

There were no injuries.

Yarrows Supervisory Union Held to Joint Bargaining

The recently-certified union of supervisory personnel at Yarrows shipyard must bargain in conjunction with all other unions in the plant, the Labor Relations Board has ruled.

The board also ruled that 15 foremen at the shipyard who have the right to fire, suspend and discipline other employees cannot be considered as "employees" under the B.C. Labor Code and therefore cannot be a part of the union.

The board, in its decisions, upheld an earlier decision which had been appealed by the union, the Association of Commercial and Technical Employees. (ACTE).

The union was certified at Yarrows in July, 1974, but the certification order included the decision that ACTE must conduct its bargaining in conjunction with the other Yarrows unions which belong to the Joint Shipyard Conference.

The board also ruled at that time that the foremen could not belong to the union, a decision that ACTE also appealed.

In its appeal decision, the LRB member pointed out that people in industry with the title "foremen" are normally eligible for union membership, but, the board found, the Yarrows foremen are "an arm of management" and cannot be included in the union certification.

The exclusion of the foremen from the union brings its members down from about 23 people to only eight.

The union argued that it should not have to bargain with the other unions because it was improper that supervisors should have their terms and conditions set by a council which is dominated by the employees they supervise.

Supervisors were first entitled to form unions and bargain collectively under a clause in the B.C. Labor Code, brought in by the NDP government.

Since that time, supervisory units have run into trouble in deciding just who should and who should not be members of the union.

Yarrows shipyard was plagued by labor troubles until the joint shipyard conference was formed to bargain for all unions in 1966.

Shipyard conference chairman Jim McAvoy argued that if ACTE was left out of the conference, other unions would also want to leave it and bargain on their own, bringing about further labor unrest. The board agreed and ruled that ACTE must act in concert with other unions.

Victoria Cougars got a scare when Kamloops Chiefs won the first two games of their best-of-seven Western Canada Hockey League playoff. But the Cats came back to win the first-round series four games to two Sunday, then were subjected to another scare. A report that a bomb had been planted on the plane returning them to Victoria proved groundless.

Cougars will meet New Westminster Bruins at Memorial Arena Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the first game of the semi-finals. Second game is at New Westminster Thursday with the third game of the best-of-seven series here Saturday. Page 10.

Mekong Battle Begins: Shells Reach Saigon

Times News Services

Communist gunners less than eight miles from the centre of Saigon fired into the city's suburbs today in the first major attack on the capital since the current offensive began.

The shelling came one day after government troops made their first significant counter-attack against the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong offensive, re-occupying the abandoned city of Nha Trang, 188 miles northeast of Seaogon.

Communist forces also shelled at least 10 district capitals in the rice-rich Mekong Delta today.

Most of the shelling in the delta, where one-third of South Vietnam's 20 million people live, was in Dinh Tuong province about 35 miles south of Saigon.

The rice-rich and usually peaceful delta now appears to be shaping up as the next major target of the North Vietnamese forces.

U.S. military analysts says the probing attacks now beginning in the region are virtually certain to increase in intensity as part of a plan to both cut off the delta from the capital and tie up South Vietnamese forces there so they cannot reinforce Saigon.

In the short term, cutting off the delta would leave Saigon feeling isolated. In the longer term, it would create food shortages in the capital.

Meanwhile, the Pentagon denied that evacuation of United States citizens from Saigon was imminent despite a growing U.S. naval armada off South Vietnam.

The U.S. embassy in Saigon and independent sources reported at least one aircraft carrier, three destroyers, six amphibious ships and part of a marine division were standing by.

Three other aircraft carriers, including the nuclear-powered Enterprise, are within a short distance of the coast, reports said.

Informed sources said the marines were prepared to land in Saigon to evacuate Americans and some Vietnamese if major fighting or chaos broke out.

There are nearly 6,000 Americans still in South Vietnam, although many have begun leaving.

Britain today evacuated most of its 29-man embassy staff and all its dependents and their baggage aboard a chartered Cathay Pacific Airways 707 jet to Hong Kong, diplomatic sources said.

The actual diplomatic staff at the embassy will be 10 or fewer by the end of this week, the sources said.

Saigon's defences though may be bolstered somewhat by some of the several thousand troops that escaped from the abandoned northern sectors.

Though these soldiers arrived largely unarmed and in tatters, Pentagon officials believe that up to six battalions, or close to half of a 10,000-man division, can probably be reconstituted from

★ MORE BABIES ON WAY

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Sixty-one Cambodian and Vietnamese orphans arrived here Sunday from war-torn South Vietnam.

In Saigon, the government said today that "operation babylift" will go on and Vietnamese orphans will be allowed to fly out of the country to new homes in the U.S., Canada and other countries.

Deputy Prime Minister Phan Quang Dan announced resumption of the evacuation of orphans only hours after it was halted.

He said the government would make sure all orphans leaving the beleaguered nation would be adopted.

Resumption of the emergency babylift program came after pressure from officials of the U.S., Canada and Australia — the three countries directly involved in the evacuation — was put on the Saigon government, U.S. embassy sources here said.

Ten of the children who arrived on the flight to Canada Sunday were survivors from a U.S. military transport that crashed near Saigon Friday. Most of the orphans will be with their new families today.

Senator Ray Perrault, who represented the department of immigration at Vancouver International Airport, said before the Canberra announcement that Ottawa is re-assessing its position and will make a statement, probably early in the week.

He said Canadian officials in Saigon were evaluating the cases of orphans there and would be referring some for adoption in Canada in cases where there was a "valid need for adoption."

He said the terms of a valid need are best determined by Canadian officials in Saigon.

Wait, Worry Worth It As Thien Comes Home

Two-year-old Thien Erich Mueller was in a jolly frame of mind this morning, after his 6,500-mile plane journey from South Vietnam.

Thien is one of 61 orphan children two arrived at Vancouver International Airport Sunday, en route to new homes in North America.

Seven went to B.C. families, two of them in Victoria.

Thien was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Erich Mueller while a nine-month-old boy Jamie was adopted by Norman and Betty Henson of 4203 Leeron Place.

The Hensons were told in August the adoption had been approved.

Since then the whole family, including the Hensons' four other children (two of them adopted) have been waiting eagerly for his arrival.

Mrs. Henson and her husband, a building contractor, said they didn't want any further publicity because "it's a family thing."

Mrs. Mueller was also reluctant to talk about the adoption of Thien but said the publicity might encourage other families to adopt overseas children.

"It is because someone else gave an interview that we have Thien today," Mrs. Mueller said.

"We wanted to adopt a boy but there were none available here. Then the interview started us thinking about overseas children.

"I want to emphasize this was not a spur of the moment thing. We adopted Thien when he was in Vietnam in September. We had all the background on him and we saw his picture.

"After that it was just a case of waiting and worrying. First he was coming, then he wasn't. I'm all wrung out."

They met Thien at the airport in Vancouver on Sunday. He was fully dressed except for shoes.

This morning, Thien had a new set of clothes — and a pair of shoes.

He says something that sounds like "maaaa!" and then points. When he is hungry he picks up a dish and hands it to whoever is near.

Except for a cold, he appears in good health. He is in excellent spirits and looks well fed.

This morning he alternated between playing with his toys and hugging his new family.

"He has only cried once, so far. When I tried to give him a bath. So I just gave him a light wash. I'm glad he cried. It showed he wasn't in a state of shock."

Thien Erich Mueller is named after his new father

Peace Talk Bid

Times News Services

Phnom Penh, Thailand's foreign minister Chartchai Choonhaven said today in Bangkok that his government had contacted the rebels about starting peace talks with the Cambodian government in Bangkok.

"It is a direct contact," Chartchai told reporters after hosting a luncheon for Cambodian Prime Minister Long Boret prior to the latter's return to Phnom Penh.

"We made that proposal to the Khmer Rouge on a humanitarian basis," Chartchai said. "As a neighboring country of Cambodia, we don't want to see the continuing bloodshed.

"The Cambodian government accepted our offer to have Bangkok as a place for negotiations. It is now up to the Khmer Rouge to decide whether they want peace negotiations or not. If they turn down our proposal, they must be responsible for what will happen in the future to their country and people."

Israel Pressured

TEL AVIV (UPI) — The United States is putting "low-keyed" pressure on Israel to make further concessions toward reaching a second-stage accord in the Sinai desert with Egypt, Israeli government officials said today.

"Low-keyed but definite slight pressure is being put on Israel by the United States which is putting Israel in an uncomfortable position," one official said.

Another official said that continued pressure by the United States on Israel "makes it more difficult for the Israeli government to rely on a continued U.S. friendship as a substitute for real and conventional strategic barriers."

Third Unit Of CUPE Seeks Pact

A third unit of Canadian Union of Public Employees is reported to be exploring separate settlement terms with management in the area's civic strike-lockout now in its 11th week.

The 91-member Capital Regional District employee group has informed the CUPE area bargaining committee of its intention to follow city inside workers in their attempt today to reach a satisfactory understanding with employers.

Both moves came quickly on the heels of a conditional settlement reached secretly by School District 61 and janitors and maintenance men belonging to CUPE 382, who agreed late Friday to accept the terms eventually negotiated by the area bargaining committee and regional employers.

The CUPE area bargaining group was meeting late this morning to discuss the latest developments in the civic and school employee confrontation with trustees, aldermen and regional directors in four core municipalities, SD 61 and Sidney.

Part of the matter to be determined in the initial talks between the local and the city and regional district is whether employers will lift their lockout of civic employees, a decision that will have to take into account the other municipal jurisdictions of the area.

There was a move at the weekend to lift the lockout as far as the juvenile detention home is concerned.

City outside workers Local 50 president Jim Walker, chairman of CUPE area bargaining, said he was personally willing to remove pickets from the institution in order to remove children from the undesireable alternative accommodation in RCMP cells.

Walker was still smarting today over secret talks between the school board and janitor's Local 382 to end the six-weeks-old maintenance strike at some 50 area schools.

Walker said the janitor local was entitled to bargain separately, just as inside workers at city hall may negotiate with Victoria as a single unit. The difference is that Local 382 failed to grant the area bargaining group its confidence.

"We're all autonomous," Walker said. "Any of the employers can do the same thing. But when you don't know what is going on it takes you by surprise."

Referring to the janitor's executive, he added:

ULSTER SUFFERS WORST WEEKEND

BELFAST (UPI) — A 30-year-old Roman Catholic on his way to work at a linen factory was shot to death today in Ulster's worst weekend of violence in two years that threatened the Irish Republican Army ceasefire.

Police said the shooting of the worker at Mossley, about 10 miles from Belfast, brought to 11 the number of persons killed in less than 48 hours in Northern Ireland. At least 80 persons were injured in the weekend upsurge of pub bombings and shootings.

Police said two gunmen jumped from a car and shot the worker point-blank while his two companions fled to safety inside the factory gate.

The shooting, believed by police to be a straightforward sectarian assassination, occurred as Britain's Minister for Northern Ireland met with top security advisers to consider emergency measures to meet the rise in violence.

Hughes Sought Longer War: Aides

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Billionaire Howard Hughes sought to continue the war in Vietnam until he could recover losses in his helicopter program, the Las Vegas Sun reported today.

The Sun said it confirmed the report with two former Hughes aides — one-time Nevada operations manager Robert Maheu and former "scientific advisor" John Meier.

"I would never have disclosed this voluntarily, but in late 1968 or early 1969 Hughes wrote a memorandum urging that we exert our influence to continue the Vietnam war in order to recoup Hughes' losses on the L.O. (light observationary) helicopter program," Maheu was quoted as saying by the Sun.

"I found the memorandum incredible and offensive and I did nothing about it," said Maheu.

Meier, who lives in a suburb of Vancouver, confirmed he had seen one memorandum dealing with the helicopter program and the Vietnam war. He said that the memo was sent to Maheu by Hughes suggesting that Maheu "should get to our friends in Washington and see what could be done about keeping the war in Vietnam going" to benefit the Hughes helicopter program.

Maheu, when contacted by United Press, said when he refused to co-operate with Hughtes' wishes regarding the attempt to perpetuate the war, that he believed it contributed to his losing his job with Hughes in late 1970.

"I wouldn't buy it (the Hughes directive) and in early 1970 Hughes reminded me of my lack of co-operation. I think this had something to do with my dismissal later that year," said Maheu.

Meier is being sued by the Hughes operation on charges he defrauded the billionaire in the acquisition of thousands of mining claims in Nevada in the late 1960s. Meier is also under federal indictment on charges of tax violations, He forfeited a $100,000 cash bond several months ago when he failed to appear in a Nevada court on the tax charge.

Maheu also has had legal encounters with the Hughes organization since he was fired in December, 1970, as head of Hughes' Nevada operations. Maheu won a $2.8 million libel suit in Los Angeles federal court last July against Hughes.

MLAs Back on Job After Easter Break

The politicians will resume debate of the government's spending estimates for the next year and will pick up with the agriculture department where they left off on March 26.

So far they have used up about 30 hours of the 135 hours set aside for estimates debate under new house time limits and only the premier's office and finance department have had spending estimates approved.

Another 19 departments remain to be debated.

Only a handful of bills have been introduced by the government since the spring session began Feb. 18, despite Premier Barrett's promise that 70 to 90 pieces of legislation would be brought down.

Debate of estimates is expected to take the house into mid-May and, depending on the number of bills finally brought down, the session will likely continue into June.
